Haven't seen a forum with this potenial as high as this. Most forums has this promise; We'll never sell or end this forum yet they always do in the end or plan to. No matter the budget. However, GeneralMB is a forum seen nowhere, it's unique in it's own way, just a few changes and maybe a theme change and it would be better and better. There will always be improvements. I prefer to just try this out for 24 hours at least and see how it goes.

NurSpec - November 1, 2014, 7:11 am

Looks awesome and all, but I don't understand why people keep trying to create general discussion boards. They literally always end up dying and cannot compete with the current larger forums, such as HackForums as a prime example. This is not a dig at you guys and I generally hope you can succeed.

I'd give a proper, in-depth review however the site currently isn't loading for me. I might come back and edit this post if I get time.

Good luck though guys, I hope you can pull through.

Board Members, these members own a percentage of the forums during their payment duration.
During this time they have a say in everything, staff, themes, partnerships and so on.
Certain Board Members receive Moderator powers (added to Jr Moderators group) at the discretion of our Staff member Exodus.
This gives the community a chance to take pride in being a part owner of the forums and gives the members a bigger say in everything going on.

Not really, all members benefit from it, since if they suggest something that gets denied if they can get a Board Member on their side it can actually stir up a discussion about making that change.
It's a benefit for all members.

The simple yet best one, we are one of few General Discussion boards to do it legit, i.e. no merged forums, although we looked we have no pulled out of that and are going on our own stats.
4000+ posts in less than 5 weeks for a forum in one of the hardest categories to pull off is amazing.
