Those are very basic if you break them down. They might look complicated, but thats just the formatting and such that was used.

I use woocommerce for my sites, and I have seen a lot of themes that you can use to replicate the links you posted. All you really need is a theme that has a slideslide feature at the top. From there you have the main content which would be your blog posts. Then on the right hand side you have the widgets, which you can edit to be anything you want. You can toss a calendar on there, with links to your posts, or a archive/blogroll part. Anything you want! :)
