

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: Infecting Members

9ine - October 17, 2014, 8:16 am

Let's say I put a backdoored download on a forum in-which HF members may be active on, and then a member from hf downloads the file.

Am I in the wrong?

Spoiler (Click to View)

This hasn't happened yet, just wanted to know incase I'm ever in that position.

My Dixie Normous - October 17, 2014, 8:17 am

No, whatever you do offsite is non of our business.

Staff here don't police the whole internet.

Yoshikage Kira - October 17, 2014, 8:17 am

I think it only applies to this forum.

webdev77 - October 17, 2014, 8:18 am

You shouldn't knowingly infect members of HF ever.

9ine - October 17, 2014, 8:19 am

(Oct 17, 2014 08:18 AM)webdev77 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You shouldn't knowingly infect members of HF ever.

I don't mean it as in purposely infecting members.

SoulZeh - October 17, 2014, 8:38 am

Well no, if you have no clue that there is HF members on that other forum nothing can be done.. But if you know they are a hf member you should probably remove it.

Roger Waters - October 17, 2014, 8:43 am

If they find out that its you doing it then you can be reported. Just because you are doing it off-site does not give you the right to go around infecting members.