

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: This section is utter shit

Stay Plural - November 5, 2014, 1:34 am

For those who really are interested in photography, just use <http://reddit.com/r/photography> for discussion

This section is effectively dead, and consist of people using high contrasted photoshopped bullshit with a t2i and a load of others just asking what camera to get, which is a retarded question-- if you learn your shit, you'll know what camera you should want and get, same way with cars. That's like asking what car we should choose for you. It's your own style, taste, affordability and etc.

And only a tiny portion of you actually photograph at a somewhat "semi-professional" level but you're the type who run a facebook for your "biz"

pce

Mia Malkova - November 5, 2014, 1:39 am

Don't people come here to ask questions? I thought that would be the whole point of the section?

m8, umad?

MaxThePro - November 5, 2014, 1:42 am

I honestly did not know that this SF existed before your thread as I have never seen anyone post in it lol.

Nvidia - November 5, 2014, 6:44 am

I took a look at a few of your photos from your previous 2 or 3 threads. They aren't that great. I wouldn't be talking. They seemed to be average shots, regardless if there's a sunset, or a bridge and you think it's the perfect time to take the shot and not edit the photo. You need to go about some slight editing to improve the lighting/shadows. Maybe even colors? You throw yourself out here like you know what you're doing. I'm no professional though. I try to find balance in editing between good and overkill.

Cubs - November 5, 2014, 7:24 am

I agree with you, I posted a thread a few days ago and one person replied one it.

Stay Plural - November 5, 2014, 11:40 am

(Nov 5, 2014 07:44 AM)Nvidia Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I took a look at a few of your photos from your previous 2 or 3 threads. They aren't that great. I wouldn't be talking. They seemed to be average shots, regardless if there's a sunset, or a bridge and you think it's the perfect time to take the shot and not edit the photo. You need to go about some slight editing to improve the lighting/shadows. Maybe even colors? You throw yourself out here like you know what you're doing. I'm no professional though. I try to find balance in editing between good and overkill.

What the fuck are you talking about Imao, "I try to find balance in editing" you don't know what the fuck you're saying.

And I'm pretty sure all my threads are removed, and my actual work doesn't surface on a damn forum without watermarks around sketchy ass people

And I'm sorry, just what is your bullshit point here? Because this thread is confronting the fact that this section is shit and seemingly it seems you're objecting? Idiot.

Xanz - November 5, 2014, 3:27 pm

This sections doesn't suck, it's just very inactive :(we need more photographers on this site.

Nvidia - November 5, 2014, 5:04 pm

(Nov 5, 2014 12:40 PM)Stay Plural Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What the fuck are you talking about lmao, "I try to find balance in editing" you don't know what the fuck you're saying.

And I'm pretty sure all my threads are removed, and my actual work doesn't surface on a damn forum without watermarks around sketchy ass people

And I'm sorry, just what is your bullshit point here? Because this thread is confronting the fact that this section is shit and seemingly it seems you're objecting? Idiot.

Yes, balance in editing. You don't understand? I know what I am talking about. There are some photo takers who are rookie in Photoshop and overkill the photo. Anyways, my point is that you claim this section sucks, but your photos suck. All your threads are not removed, from what it seems.

that1guy2112 - November 5, 2014, 6:29 pm

I say speak for yourself! Yes some posts are a little pointless, "Hey look at this picture of a flower I took with my new point and shoot!" But then again, this section is nice to find and get others opinions on some real work you've done or ask about opinions on new gear. Just because it's become LQ in your eyes, doesn't mean you have the right to speak for all of us. I like coming and checking in and seeing what's new. If I have new stuff I'd like an opinion on, I'd love a place to be able and post it to others here.