Thread: [Disallow Steam Stealers \[read\]](#)

Obli - November 14, 2014, 5:20 am

Greetings, gentlemen and... gentlemen.

I had meant to make such a suggestion for a while now, but I lacked the proof that people used Steam Stealers to actually steal money, and the owners of such stealers told me that it wasn't necessarily "real" money.

(Refer to: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4507931&page=3>

Spoiler (Click to View)

Now, let's get started, shall we?

As most of us have seen, a lot of people are marketing their Steam Stealers, even a guide on how to spread efficiently.

The owners refuted my arguments by giving me a bullshit argument concerning RATs even though it had nothing to do with that.

Why are BTC stealers disallowed? Because BTC is an actual form of currency.

Now, you can say that it's "virtually" not worth anything all you want, but when the owners of the said product advertize their product as a way to steal money, then you got an issue there pal.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4498663>

Need I say more? Items are being stolen daily, skins worth hundreds are being taken away. As the customer said, he defined his items as worth actual euros.

<http://steamcommunity.com/market/>

<http://tf2outpost.com/>

<http://www.reddit.com/r/tf2trade/>

What are these, you may ask? Why, those are 3 of the sites which can utilize real money to obtain items.

I do know that I have made this suggestion once before. And that it was locked because a "rat" can do what steam stealers do.

RATs CAN steal BTC. RATs CAN steal PP, but people don't buy them for such things nor are they advertized as such. I know that the owners of said products will come here and give me excuses for allowing their stuff only for them to make a quick buck at the cost of thousands of dollars of items worth.

Do people sell those items? Yes. They make money off from those. Example:

Here, you can see this fine lad stealing, and as he said "11 pages of pure keys" which have a marketplace value!

<http://prntscr.com/52fv3c>
<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?pid=43147377#pid43147377>

If staff does not agree, then go ahead and lock this, I won't make any other thread nor bitch about such a thing again. But at the same time, more and more people will lose their inventories because of this being advertized on HF.

?Salty? - November 14, 2014, 5:25 am

Sorry, but I disagree.

Why is RAtIng allowed? People can make massive profits with that too, by stealing STEAM accounts, stealing RuneScape accounts and gold, RuneScape Private Server gold.

Sorry, but there's so many examples and I just don't feel like this would be right.

My personal opinion.

This isn't even a RAT. It instantly sends you a trade offer on Steam with the target's inventory.

RATting is not advertized as "Want to make massive profit by stealing steam inventories (which have an actual market to themselves! meaning they are worth real and actual money!)) and tons of other stuff?". Nope. They are not advertized as that.

Steam stealers are advertized as that. Oh, so I can make a BTC stealer and advertize it as "Want to steal BTCs and just look at them? Buy this!"?

No, BTC is considered an actual currency, virtual items, also known as STEAM Items are not. I'm sorry, but I just don't see this enforced.

Not that it would hurt me, if this rule was enforced, but I just don't see why. We are a hacking forum, and let's stay that way. STEAM is virtual items, which means, it's not a real currency. Obviously, you can sell the items, but you are not obligated to.

But yes, I do agree with what you are saying, it's in fact stealing from people.

Krew - November 14, 2014, 5:32 am

Those threads can be considered "Disallowed Blackhat activity". If you report it to a mod that knows the rules, it should be removed.

And? They are worth real money, how hard is that to understand? Even the owners of steam stealers approve. (Refer to screenshots)

You can ONLY get those items by PAYING REAL MONEY.

It is WORTH real money, it's not about being "obligated to" when the people selling the said stealers encourage you to buy their product for the only and obvious reason: Make money.

wellager - November 14, 2014, 5:34 am

I've read the whole thread and I must agree with OP.

TF2, DotA and CS:GO have an economy, you can't possibly refute that. Hats with particle effects in TF2, earbuds and crate keys can range from two bucks to THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS - the most expensive hat which was ever sold in tf2's economy history was worth $8000ish (a Burning Team Captain, look it up), more or less -

When you buy the products in the OP, their sole purpose is to get you those fancy hats with particle effects, earbuds and crate keys. Those items stand as a currency and they're the core of the economy, people make a lot of money with items.

While LaPanthere uses the example of a keylogger, sensitive information does not stand as a form of currency. One cannot pay using private information to get money, but you can trade your keys to money and it goes the other way around.

Think about it; let's say that you use this stealer to get 10 earbuds from a guy who worked his ass off to buy them. What are you going to do with them? Saying that the thief will keep the earbuds is delirious, an earbud is worth ~28$ which makes almost three hundred dollars. What is the thief going to sell them for? BTC/Paypal (the former is smarter when selling stolen goods as Valve does care about thefts).

In my honest opinion, steam inventory stealers should be disallowed on HF. Not only can they be considered as infinitely blackhat as you steal hundreds - if not thousands - of dollars worth of items using a software made to do that. You can use RATs/keyloggers for educational purposes or in legal ways, but inventory stealers can NEVER be used in such ways. A RAT might be used by a network administrator to conduct researches more easily, a keylogger might only be used for personal purposes... what the hell are you going to do with an inventory stealer? Saying an inventory stealer is the same as a RAT is like saying a bitcoins stealer is the same as a RAT... both steal a form of currency which is VERY popular. Furthermore the prime purpose of a RAT isn't to steal inventories as it's harder than you'd think to do so with a RAT... an inventory purpose is, again, programmed to do that task efficiently and quickly.

If they were only used within Steam, which means that no outer websites/communities would use them, your statement would be correct. Do you have any idea how many refined metal units were traded in the past 24 hours?

And metal is dropping atm.

What are you going to do with the items? Are you going to contemplate the ten earbuds you just stole? Perhaps are you going to keep that unusual you stole until it gets reverted to its original owner and you get a tradeban?

You can pay for the items or gold. I agree with this thread.

Buffalo - November 14, 2014, 5:50 am

OP is 100% correct. GG Steam advertised "How to make thousands in just a few days" which is from stealing people's inventories.

There has never been anything in TF2, or CS:GO of value that you could get without paying. You can unbox knives in CSGO yet you still have to pay, just like you can unbox unusualls in TF2 if you're lucky but you still have to pay too.

Steam accounts, without inventories but with games are also worth money too, although you cannot really steal steam games except if they're in your inventory and not in your library.

I disagree with it , Even thro it is basicly the same as stealing money.

If you start banning everything that has some blackhat-greyhat activity in it this forum will turn into a ebook selling forum.

Which half of those ebooks contain not fully legal method, and most of the time not working.

Alright, let's allow BH activity then, is that what you're saying? This is borderline BH IMO.

I'm not asking to disallow other stuff like RATs or keyloggers, I did register on this forum to "hack" at first, but stealing steam inventories is comparable to stealing actual money, as you have said.

So if they woud rename their product to "Steam inventory checker"

And put another product description like , you will be able to spy on your steam targets inventory (They can obviously make a better description) , This woud make it not encouraging users of the product to steal. Woud this change anything?

This is just an example , The idea is if they make it sound like it is not for stealing , which is the same concept as rat , Woud this make the product different?

It woud be exactly the same , everyone will know it , yet they dont encourage stealing.

Just make the steam stealer infect the computers like a RAT, and then people can see how many items they have in the inventory and there should be a button where you can make them send their items you have selected to send to you in a trade offer.

No, but "black-hat" ebooks can tell you to "steal" money.(I remember one ebook telling you to go on DeepWeb and buy drugs and sell them on street lol) - If not you as a customer at least "owner" is stealing your money!

Botnets are basically made for fraud, none bot is made for "educational" purposes. Tell me how can you use Bot for that??

Rats are basically "skid" tools to steal money, passwords and with download/execute bunch more stuff. And again it's only for "educational" purposes.

Yet those steam stealers have NO "educational purposes" nor are they advertized as such. Come on, you can already see the inventory of anyone on Steam except if their profile is private.

So you are not really trying to get them disallowed from marketplace but to make them for "educational purposes"?

HF should then make just one additional rule: "Everything sold here on HF is for educational purposes only.

Then I can start making ransomwares and sell them for "educational purposes"?

"Here is one and the only Locker you will ever need, it can make you $1million dollars per month AND it's for educational purposes!!"

The title is "disallow steam stealers". He's saying that they have no educational purpose whatsoever as it's a tool for stealing, you're trying to make him say things he never said/implied.

Not at all. For instance, SE is still forbidden even at the instances of "educational purposes".

"Make you $...." and "educational purposes" is an oxymoron, I'm afraid. I am suggesting disallowing those stealers permanently.

lol the point i'm trying to say is yeah you use real money to obtain these items, but they can't be used for real world things except of reselling it for actual currency. Therefore it should be allowed.

Can you pay for a product with your steam item? No exactly. Btc you can use for a variety of things unlike a steam item where you use it for a game or trade it for another item or resell for currency.

It's not about being able to pay for a certain product with the said items. They are still worth money and CAN be sold for real money, as hundreds of keys are being traded daily for real money, if not thousands that is.

same for the stealer. its used to get something thats worth money. and only that.

Who ever said that?

You can sell the said items on the steam market.

You can sell the said items, skins, etc... for real money. Want me to link you to some people who are buying the said items? I can :)

They hold a certain currency as long as you can deposit real money in Steam and buy keys/said items.

They hold as a currency in the steam market only. Not the real world. They do hold a currency since you technically bought them with your money but hold no real world currency without either reselling the said item or stuff of that nature.

As long as people deal with them with REAL money, they hold a real value. Holding a market value? That too. People buy keys for PP, BTC, etc...

Yes, correct but as far as being a only virtual item then it holds no financial value of that nature except reselling or buying them.

They do; people sell keys for 1.80$ BTC, earbuds for 28$ each and both of them are used not only in trading, but also in trading for other items within communities.

And what about BTC which are considered as a virtual currency? Just because it's virtual doesn't mean that it's not a valid currency. People deal with hundreds of keys daily, if not thousands.

You can make profit by flipping, it is very comparable to BTC if anything with the price fluctuation. I beg to differ, they do hold a value as long as you can obtain PP or any other form of payment.

Since you can obtain real money in the real world with those items, then they do hold a "currency" in the real world. ?

The fact is that RATs can be used for a variety of purposes which just go over the simple stealing etc... so, prohibiting them on the forum just because they have the POTENTIAL to be used to steal stuff etc, would be ridiculous.

Anyway the problem with STEAM stealers, in this case, is different: their only role and job... is to steal!

No matter how much the items are worth, if they are real money or whatever: that's another kind of discussion.

You can use a RAT for "educational purposes" (even tho it's just ridiculous even attempting to justify their use with such a sentence)... but you can't use a software which has been developed to STEAL stuff for the same reasons.

This is different: this is PROMOTING illegal and immoral actions.

That's why I'm with OP, and in my opinion, they should be banned from HF.

SomeWhiteGuy - November 14, 2014, 1:57 pm

While I do think stealing is wrong, I don't understand how someone could be stupid enough to download something advertised in a YT vid/wherever else/download anything from the Internet, period lol.

If you are stupid enough to do so, then the only person you have to blame is yourself when your shit gets stolen because you were actually stupid enough to download something from a source that you've never heard of!

I see no problem with them. People have always sold immoral things. If this was a "money making e-book" that had "blackhat intentions" you wouldn't know just by reading the sales thread. Just because the owners of these products aren't bull shitting other people or trying to hide their products actual purpose, you think that they should be disallowed?

I disagree completely.

If these were to be disallowed just based on what you're saying, then crypters should be disallowed. "Blackhat" ebooks should be disallowed. Hell, screw the specific help document that tells you what Omni thinks is going to far, let's rename it to: "Disallowed No Blackhat Activity PERIOD".

Natas - November 14, 2014, 2:02 pm

Well let me put it this way.

I got my steam stolen along time ago hundreds and hundreds of steam accounts ago, It was my main and my original account. After I was ratted and pretty much doxed, AMBULANCED & ALL my accounts got stolen,

I came here then I learnt how to not get my accounts stolen.

Its a pro feature for users.

butwhatif - November 14, 2014, 2:03 pm

Gotta disagree man, people are using RATs to steal allot of shit only are advertised differently WE ALL KNOW that 99% of the people here on HF that have a RAT don't use it for LEGAL purposes and the owners as well.

gon4eva - November 14, 2014, 2:13 pm

Sorry but RATTING is not instant profit. It's access to a computer or device, to monetize from there isn't super easy unless we get in to carding and other black hat activities which are disallowed to be discussed here.

I can steal an inventory and sell for PayPal within a day. The same goes for wow/runescape and other game item stealers. Pretty sure that's not allowed either? I just think it's really shitty way to steal money from someone.

Been missing your avatar, haha.

Powa. - November 14, 2014, 2:20 pm

Steam Stealers are made with the sole purpose of stealing. RAT's do have legitimate purposes.
That's the difference.

PhoenixHF - November 14, 2014, 2:30 pm

This is just plain stupid. Everything can be abused.
A phisher can steal accounts from banks to kid games site.
A keylogger can keylog your chat with a hooker and your paypal account.
A RAT can infect your server and your old laptop for gaming on miniclip.
And so on..
No reason to destroy someones hard work and finances due to your jealousy & misconception.

?Hydra? - November 14, 2014, 2:37 pm

I hate to say it but i agree with OP.

It's stealing and people loose items worth thousands.

Raz3d - November 14, 2014, 2:39 pm

I can't agree more. I even lost my items once due to methods like these, when I was new. It's stealing as the user above said.

Acesss - November 14, 2014, 2:54 pm

I have to agree.
I mean, if they didn't advertise it as a way to steal money I feel that'd be better.
Their accounts will eventually get banned anyways. One of mine did yesterday.

Natas - November 14, 2014, 4:50 pm

People need to learn how to not get there computers infected that simple.

And here is the place to learn so,
