Thread: What is your definition of "being rich"

Who Soup - November 14, 2014, 11:20 pm

I recently got into a discussion with someone on what rich really means. Does it mean rich in love? Rich in physical belongings? Rich in spiritual belief?

what do ya'll think?

to me being rich is when you're able to use milk with your hamburger helper instead of a extra cup of water. ???

Incognito™ - November 14, 2014, 11:21 pm

having a home, food, clothes and left over money to buy stuff that you want.

420 Blaze It - November 14, 2014, 11:21 pm

Enough to support yourself, and maybe someone else and a bit extra.

Nowajaz - November 15, 2014, 12:41 am

I believe rich is someone with physical wealth such as money, cars etc.

Slot??h - November 15, 2014, 12:49 am

Someone who has a great deal of money or assets.

Cody - November 15, 2014, 12:50 am

It's whatever you want it to be; like you said you can be rich in many ways.

Man16 - November 15, 2014, 1:00 am

To me, someone who can't work a day in their life and be living in a house with the necessary resources such as the following: Food, Water, snacks, computer, television, etc.

Eminem????? ???? - November 15, 2014, 2:22 am

Being rich is being able to pay for all your necessities, and then being able to buy what your heart desires.

dapperlordx - November 15, 2014, 2:24 am

Rich is when your kids are healthy :)

Coton Pker - November 15, 2014, 2:25 am to me, the generic term "rich" means monetary value.

to say someone is rich, is to say they have excessive money.

Daniel Faraday - November 15, 2014, 2:27 am

Being rich is making more than $250k a year.

DARPA - November 15, 2014, 2:27 am

Two 1.2 million dollar house owned completely and a $1000 in cash every week to spend on non essential items.

A?.ntichrist - November 15, 2014, 4:40 am

This question must be a joke. Of course most people are going to answer correctly:

"Rich people have a myriad of worldly possessions". My Grand Aunt is a millionaire so I know first handed what being rich looks like, they visited us last summer showing off their new private jet, not going to comment on that one but even though they are "rich" in the classical sense they are good people and some of them are also rich in spiritual beliefs(sounds like a religious innuendo in my opinion but whatever) since they practice Judaism. I'm a proud agnostic so I'm not really contra religion but my religious upbringing was kind of like brainwashing.

sido98 - November 15, 2014, 5:00 am

My definition of Rich:

Having money, having a big house, cars etc. Can afford to purchase expensive things and doesn't care too much about the cost of things.

Doesn't necessarily include love or happiness. You can be poor and happy - and rich and sad.

Mefie - November 15, 2014, 5:27 am

I believe, you are "rich" in something if you have more from that thing than that is enough to support your and your family's healthy lifestyle

A?.ntichrist - November 15, 2014, 2:22 pm

Just to clear things up, most comments hint that being a billionaire is what they would consider as being rich. Only billionaires have so much money that they spend it on so called "fantasy" purchases (the things that even millionaires can't buy, or even if they could wouldn't cause they are that expensive). Billionaires are the only people who don't have to care about the price tags.

Fun fact: there are around 792 billionaires. Not as rare as most people would expect it to be. Prodigious savants such as Kim Peek and Daniel Tammet are fewer in quantity (around 100).

BUT I assume you've had a different experience. I surely do care more about my cat than my family.

the definition of rich to me, is when you no longer have to struggle to get the things you "want" and already have the things you need

Powa. - November 16, 2014, 10:47 am

Well, I see wealthy and rich as two different things.

I think the less time you have to work to sustain a standard of living your happy with makes you richer. But of course, the more money you have the wealthier you are.

So in essence, I am not a believer that time is money.. But I believe that money is time.

Okay as far as financially, I would say someone who brings home between $100,000 to $500,000 per month.

Also I would say anyone that has a family that supports them and loves them and SHOWS it is rich. Not everyone has that and many would kill for it. I personally wish I had a more supportive family but I guess I can't have it all in that department. ?
