As I am running on a Linux server (Canada 4), I would like to verify my experience is as amazing as you should expect. Not only does the server blast away anything I throw at it, I found out that my server was attacked yesterday. Upon questioning my gameserver and teamspeak users, I found that not a single person noticed any sort of latency or lag issues. Nobody even saw a hiccup on performance. This goes to show what Pulse means when they say we are protected at the finest solution. I had people around the world connected to my server, and during a short-lived DDoS attack; Nobody knew anything happened.

Very happy with my experience.

The staff here at Pulse Servers wants to wish you and yours a happy holiday season! We wanted to announce a new promotion to our valued clients each week, but we're just too excited.

With that being said, we're announcing all of our December promotions at once! We're running multiple promotions simultaneously to make sure there's something for everyone.

All new orders for the VPS 1 - VPS 4 packages will cost only $1 for the first month using coupon code WINTER1.

All new orders for any VPS package will receive 50% off their first payment using coupon code WINTER50.

Any active servers can be upgraded to a higher package for 50% off, with a recurring 10% discount on the upgraded package by submitting a support ticket.

Any clients that adds credit to their account through the customer billing panel will receive an additional 15% bonus credit by submitting a support ticket.

These offers may be combined to increase savings and bonuses, and are valid until January 1, 2015.

We will also have a Christmas present for every client that has an active server in good standing on Christmas Day!

If you have any questions, please feel free to let us know. Visit our website at www.pulseservers.com for more information on the servers or to access the all-in-one panel for server control, billing, and support.

I'm always happy to speak my mind.

If you're concerned about stability (reliability) and the connection speed, then I can very easily assure you that our servers pass with flying colors. I only have one client that I know of that only hosts an IRC server, and he has been with me for a while. That should speak for itself.

The other relevant resources would be the processor (6 thread/12 core 3.8Ghz), network speed (1 GBit/s), bandwidth (unlimited), and DDoS protection (24/7 mitigation).

I'd be happy to answer any other questions you have. Have a great day!

A few more question before I make a purchase. If a complaint is made for any activity happening in my IRC, would you first contact me before terminating my service? Also, if no complaints are made and no harm is done, am I allowed to conduct task in my IRC at my own risk?

If I receive a complaint, I'll almost always speak with the client before taking action. The only exceptions to that would be if malicious activity was involved. For example, when our system detects outbound attacks/scans, or other malicious activity, the server is suspended just before we send an e-mail to the client to see their side of the story. Almost all of the time we do that, we don't even receive a response.

If no complaints are made and no harm is done, there should be no cause for concern. Bare in mind our ToS states that users may not engage in Denial of Service activity. This includes initiating or controlling attacks, or using the servers network resources to engage in malicious activity. As long as the IRC server wasn't being used to connect to hundreds of zombies in a botnet, we should be golden.

(Dec 15, 2014 10:25 PM)ExaFLOPS Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I see there are no windows os choice available. Is that possible?

No, sir! We do not offer Windows, as it wastes far too many resources just to run a graphical user interface (desktop) that simply isn't needed on a server machine. Linux is more secure, powerful, and efficient. Most of the time, the game/web/voice servers that can run on Windows will run at the same efficiency, if not better, on Linux. The programs that manage the server, FTP and SQL clients for example, can be used on your home Windows computer and will easily connect remotely to the server. This allows more resources to be available to the server for a better performance and a much better price.

I know that some people prefer Windows, and that's entirely their choice. I specialize in Linux servers and game servers. I see that you offer Windows servers, though, so I'm glad I'm not disappointing you!

Please let me know if you have any other questions.

You're able to set up a desktop on Ubuntu, and you can connect using RDP or VNC.

You'll have to follow an easy guide and install the requirements via SSH, but it's definitely do-able. I've got a server that's running Ubuntu Desktop and I connect using VNC. It's running six traffic exchanges simultaneously in a browser... 24/7.

These server packages are not just "resold" from anyone, though many people enjoy making these comments. None of the packages found on our website will be found on the OVH website.

The term reselling should be reserved for a company that sells an identical package or offer of service. I do not. Having multiple large dedicated servers with a company and using them to create custom packages for virtualized servers is totally different than reselling something that can be purchased on their website. I have no interest in discussing this further.

I typically keep to these packages to keep everything uniform.

As you're an Uber, I could make a one-time offer of improved disk space on a server, such as 120GB of disk on VPS 2 or 200 GB of disk space on VPS 4.

Tekkie - March 13, 2015, 10:26 pm

I've had many people get in touch with me, and I've gotten some promising projects started.

I've given away loads of free servers, and I've really enjoyed helping out the community. To better utilize the resources I've set aside for promotions and giveaways, I've changed up the requirements.

I'm currently looking for promising projects that just need help getting launched by being provided with powerful servers to launch with. The goal is that during the first month, the project will become stable and the owner(s) will be able to continue running their project on our servers using revenue generated from the project during the free month. We'd like to provide a free month to get it going, but the goal at the end of the today is to turn that sponsored server into a long-term client.

Everything works perfectly.

If you saw the screen that shows the bitcoin address to send it to, it's working.

Once it has received the bitcoin (typically takes less than 20 seconds, but can take up to one minute after sending), it will redirect you to an order complete screen and you will receive an e-mail from us with your servers information.

I do see those two transactions, though I'm not sure why you sent two. It was supposed to be one transaction for the exact amount specified on the page.

I added $5 credit to your account with the note "manual payment" and applied it to your invoice. Your server was deployed. Please check your e-mail.

If I'm at my desk, less than five minutes. If I'm out, it could be a few hours. Tickets go to my e-mail, which instantly arrives on both my desktop and my phone. I handle most of the tickets as I like to have the one-on-one with my clients. If we get overloaded, I'll ask the staff to help with tickets. That rarely happens.

Hey folks, just giving an update on the progress of my Pulse experience.

As I am running on a Linux server (Canada 4), I would like to verify my experience is as amazing as you should expect. Not only does the server blast away anything I throw at it, I found out that my server was attacked yesterday. Upon questioning my gameserver and teamspeak users, I found that not a single person noticed any sort of latency or lag issues. Nobody even saw a hiccup on performance. This goes to show what Pulse means when they say we are protected at the finest solution. I had people around the world connected to my server, and during a short-lived DDoS attack; Nobody knew anything happened.

Very happy with my experience.

ItsFluffy - March 27, 2015, 10:55 pm

I will continue to comment for Tekkie and Pulse Servers

The performance has been very reliable, the support very professional and the ddos protection has been excellent

I have been looking for a long for a host I can recommend outside of my personal spoofing servers for actual legit hosting, here you go guys, legit hosting in its prime!

I wouldn't hold your breath on the low end Windows servers. We've recently acquired server space in France, and are working on getting those Linux nodes populated. Once those nodes have been populated, we'll deploy additional KVM nodes in France for hosting Windows.

As Windows is a resource hog, we can't have too many servers on one node. The goal would be to have a small number of larger servers instead of a bunch of 1 GB servers.

We recently acquired server space in France and our new servers are now fully operational. Our server order forms now allow you to select either North America or Western Europe for your servers location.

While we appreciate hearing from our clients, which I'm assuming you are, you've posted on a server sales thread about our Layer 7 service. Also, you mentioned that our Layer 4 servers are never up. First, I'd like to remind you that our thread clearly states that we do not own the servers used in the Layer 4 testing and that Layer 4 is a free addition to the service being sold, which is for Layer 7. Therefore, any comments regarding Layer 4 aren't relevant to our service and should not be taken in to consideration.

Secondly, Layer 4 regularly comes online. The likely scenario is that by the time it's stable and released to our clients, it has already been taken down, as almost every layer 4 server has been in the community. Again, Layer 4 is not part of the service being sold. It's just a free addition.

I just wanted to post a clarification for anybody that may have been misled by your suggestion to "be warned". They need not be warned, as all of the services that we sell work as advertised and are fully functional.

I haven't tried, nor am I sure about the rules regarding accessing the site through a VPN. From what I've heard, it's frowned upon and all known proxies/VPN networks are blocked.

I apologize for the delay in response. A recent change has caused my availability to drop to zero during the week, so I'm getting everything sorted now that it's the weekend. Other delays are being caused by a large surge of fraudulent orders that have filled our servers, promotion abuse, system resource abuse, and a vendor related issue with our Windows servers stability. There's a lot going on, but we're working to resolve each issue and we will be generously compensating the affected clients. You'll all be getting e-mails shortly.

Terms of Service

Any malicious activity is immediately detected and the server is automatically suspended. Refunds are not provided to servers that are suspended for abuse. We have a zero tolerance policy. Our Terms of Service state that we do not tolerate malicious outbound traffic, illegal activity, or harrassing activity. This includes scanning (vulnerability and service scans included), attacking (yes, this means script kiddie perl files), brute forcing, spam mail, hosting phishing or other illegal activity websites, and illegal torrenting. Don't bother ordering a server if you're going to use it maliciously. Use these powerful servers for something good, like a website, file backup, TeamSpeak server, and maybe a game server or two for you and your friends.

The code appears to have been used.

It has been a while since Pulse Servers has had a social presence, so I thought a giveaway was in order.

The next ten Uber members and five Leet members to post on the giveaway thread will receive one of our "Linux Four" servers for one month at no cost.

If you would like to continue service with a higher or lower package, we can do that with no downtime. I will also apply a recurring 10% discount.

These servers cannot be used maliciously.

This promotion is valid for our North American servers only. Western European servers are not available for this promotion. The promotion can be found here:

My server is extremely fast! Thank you!

amg64 - November 6, 2017, 7:21 pm

I have been using many established vps providers before, but I'd never get my hands on off 4gb ram. Pulse server is surely fast in comparison to others in HF. Thanks for your nice service!

Dave Skylark - November 15, 2017, 3:19 am

I've been using this for quite some time now and it's running smooth, smooth control panel aswell as reinstall option, had no downtime and the server is really fast.

Other than that, fast servers with a fast connection, secure and no downtime.

Thank you for your feedback. You have an advanced control panel that allows you to view a lot more in-depth statistical information and perform advanced administrative tasks, like reinstalling the OS. This is explained in the welcome e-mail the automated system sent you with your server's IP address in it. If you need any help, you're more than welcome to open a support ticket.

True that, I can see, it would be nice to have it on the client panel tho, easier access.

Just tested the panel and works perfectly, reinstalling the OS now and it's quite fast.

I'd certainly agree with you, but we found putting too much functionality on the main control panel page makes it seem cluttered and overwhelming to some. I am looking into that control panel in the billing panel, though, and may make a new tab or page with the advanced stuff on it. Not sure what route to go yet, but we certainly provide the functionality one way or another.

They seem to only have Windows Server 2008 & Windows Server 2012 accordign to the thread design.

They are OVH resellers, but provide good servers.

Used em a while back

I`m looking for something similar to a vpn or rdp where i can browse from the comfort of my home and appear to be browsing from the USA. I need to have complete access to some websites. I want to be able to install an application like chrome and be able to browse with it. RDP has these but does a VPS have? Can i connect to your VPS with RDP and browse through the server?

You could contact us with your own ISO, which could be Windows 10. I don't particularly see why you'd do that, but you could.

I appreciate the compliment, but you say OVH like it's a bad thing, or like we're just reselling OVH servers for more money. We use very large physical servers from OVH as host nodes and virtualize the servers we sell. Our packages are not OVH resells and none of the packages we offer can be found on any OVH/subsidiary company. We use OVH for the good value, large network, good protection, and the ability to set specific firewall rules and configure our infrastructure in an efficient manner.

You could, and should, just deploy a Linux server with OpenVPN on it and have a much better experience using your own machine to run the GUI and operating system, but route the network traffic through the VPN and appear to have a connection from North America. Using a Windows VPS with RDP to browse the web is a bad idea.

Wasn't trying to make it sound bad. Some people just don't like OVH.

IIRC PulseServers has their own ASN, so they aren't whitelabel reselling. The just use OVH DC.

We'll be releasing a renovated website with new packages and new locations in the next month. Keep your eyes out for great promotions and giveaways. We've been running well for the past couple of years since we were last very active in online communities, but wish to get back into regular involvement with our online communities!

Tekkie - May 6, 2020, 7:58 pm

The updated HF sales thread graphics and animated signature are now live! Enjoy. Giveaways and contests are going to be ramping up soon!

I received a free month from @Tekkie, though I didn't really have much time to actually use it I did test it in the beginning of the trial period and I can say his services are solid, definitely recommending him and will use them if I'd require a server in the future.

Tekkie - April 15, 2024, 9:38 am

Hi, all! We're still here and going strong. I'll provide a coupon code to the next person who reaches out to me to get our 4GB Linux option discounted to $1 for the first month.
