It's Transgender Awareness Month and willing to answer your questions on transgender people. So fire away but please use common sense on what you're asking.

SIM-524734 - November 19, 2014, 2:07 pm

Do you have a vag or a mighty dick?

Herpesfreesince93 - November 19, 2014, 2:07 pm

Do you ever receive much abuse? Either verbal, or physical or just down to people looking at you strangely? If so how do you deal with it?

CatSoup - November 19, 2014, 2:07 pm

If you get married to another girl, is it considered gay marriage?

The Health Inspector - November 19, 2014, 2:09 pm

Are you trying to take attention away from movember? Cause there's enough of people who try to do that with their "No shave november."

I have never heard of anyone saying this is "transgender awareness month," why this month?

No physical or verbal abuse so far. It could be because people are under the impression that I'm a butch lesbian with a very short haircut or I'm gender ambiguous because I never heard a single sir or ma'am in the last two weeks but I do get stares.

(Nov 19, 2014 03:07 PM)CatSoup Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If you get married to another girl, is it considered gay marriage? Won't be considered gay marriage once my gender marker and name is changed on my naturalization certificate. Wasn't born in the US.

I have never heard of anyone saying this is "transgender awareness month," why this month? I actually have no idea but it's all over my Facebook news feed and can vouch that November is Transgender Awareness Month. That and my teacher invited me as a guest speaker for her class and to educate them on transgender people. It's very important since these students were the future scientists, doctors and engineers.

krokodill - November 19, 2014, 2:17 pm

Do you ever feel like you don't like being with a male/female and prefer one or the other at certain times?

Karnaugh - November 19, 2014, 2:18 pm

Honestly, transgenders and tranny's kind of disgust me.

Won't treat them like shit or in any different way, but it's just some preconception I have.

Right there with you on this one. It's good someone said it.

I guess it's okay for transgenders to steal the spotlight for men's health. I guess we didn't really get a lot of attention anyways.

And I'm not sure how scientists and engineers are going to be interested in hearing about transgenders*. I'm guessing you're at a level of education where these take the same types of classes?

Yes, elective classes. Need to know about other stuff other than what you are majoring in.

I believe you've mentioned you've started passing (or are you still in that phase where people give you weird stares)? If passing, what's the biggest changes you've seen in how people treat you socially?

Not passing yet nor am I clocked, face is taking a while to catch up to my masculine voice.

Face takes damn forever. I still get odd looks from random people, but I haven't done much with my hair sooo....yeah. 8 months on HRT and I think I'm finally getting to the point where I get strange looks in the boy's bathroom even wearing boy clothes. :P But since you're on T, it should go a bit faster for you (jealous).

Will you be more jealous to know that my body type is banana? Turns out I have little to no hips.

Why would I be jealous of that? xD I have some hips, just widish shoulders so that bugs me. They aren't terribly bad, but wider than my hips so clothing choices must be a tad more careful.

Who Soup - November 19, 2014, 7:23 pm

What do you identify your self as, and what were you born as?

Fat distribution should help, not enough muscle atrophy from E?

I identify as male and was assigned female at birth.

I find it disgusting, but I kinda respect the people who do it.

If I wanted to change my gender for some reason, I couldn't do it because of multiple reasons, society for example.

I had to educate people that thought that way this Monday, it's not a choice and I really silenced the class when they asked me about my family and how I'm ready to lose them. No one would choose to do this, transition is not a decision to take lightly. You're basically sacrificing your family, friends, years of marriage and children so you can feel at ease with yourself because you're losing your mind everyday remaining who you are. If there was any other way, I would have done it but there isn't an alternative outside of committing suicide or being miserable 24/7. You cannot blame people for things they are born with, some of us are born intersexed.

Today is Transgender Day of Remembrance.

RIP to those that have died due to transphobic violence.

Were you originally a guy or a girl (your actual gender, not how you feel you need to be)

You mean biological sex, gender is just a social construct. I was born female.

Who Soup - November 20, 2014, 8:51 pm

Which bathroom do you use if you were born a female but identify as a man? sorry if this is a weird question; I'm not trolling.

So far, I'm still using the women's restroom since my face changes are taking its sweet time while voice dropped quickly within 2 weeks. Right now I look androgynous and I'll give T another month or two before I start thinking about using the men's restroom.

I think you're very brave for all of this OP, my hats off to you ?

neightworks - November 21, 2014, 7:55 pm

Have you second guessed yourself at all? If you do realize somewhere down the line that you made a mistake is it possible to restore your original feminine self?

Hope that doesn't make you think too much, good luck on what's probably a grueling journey. Looking forward to more updates.

Pung0d - November 21, 2014, 8:03 pm

Well, in society where do you see yourself with mairrage?

If you married a female, it's straight if you married a male it's gay? Can you elaborate on this for me?

JoshAllen - November 21, 2014, 10:05 pm

When and Why did you choose to change your sex?

Good luck OP with the Q&A thread!

Agahni - November 21, 2014, 10:11 pm

I'm stuck wondering that do you have a vagina still? Or how does that really work.

Not trolling. just really confused.

A week before I started HRT, I did have second thoughts but not so much about transitioning because I had 3 months to think it through. It was more about my family, how neighbors will react and what is the timeline to take things further like going into the men's restroom and get my gender marker and legal name change. It was either this or be miserable for the rest of my life or possible suicide once everything stresses me out.

Yes, I'm still updating my FTM Transition thread.

I don't really plan to get married anytime soon or even date. I honestly can't fathom the idea of someone wanting to be with me, much less marry me. But yes, you are correct: it's straight if I marry a female and gay if I marry a male. Gender identity is not the same as sexual orientation.

My biological sex is still anatomically female. Gender is a social construct and that is what changes. Not really a choice, no one would choose this because you risk losing family, marriage, friends and your kids. This is not a decision to make lightly and we do it out of survival.

Well yes I still have a vagina. Though what I have down there is starting to look neither male or female.
