A simple Google search could probably of provided you with adequate answers to your question.

Quote:Less than seven days from the publication of the final "Naruto" chapters, an announcement was made that gives "Naruto" fans everywhere reason to be excited: a sequel mini-series to "Naruto" and "Naruto Shippuden" is confirmed to be in the works for Spring 2015, according to Saiyan Island.

Quote:Part 3 will reportedly feature the next generation of Hidden Leaf ninja. In other words, "the children of Naruto, Hinata, Sakura, Sasuke and others," Saiyan Island reports. However, this will not be an extensive series; merely a mini-series. How many books/chapters it will produce, and whether or not an anime can be expected, is unknown at the moment.

This is sure to create some buzz among fans on both sides of the spectrum (those who are desperate to see it and those who just want to see "Naruto" left alone). This mini-series will also, if the soon-to-be-released final chapters do not, reveal the romantic pairings that countless fans have been debating over for almost as long as the manga has been in production.

This is all a part of the "Naruto New Era Opening Project," a major project celebrating the series' 15th anniversary. There will also be releases of side story books by Shueisha, the last "Naruto" movie (suitably titled, "The Last"), a stage play and more.

Part 3 is going to be a mini series, following the end of the manga/anime. It will be revolved around the next generation's youth, though the plot has not been confirmed yet.

But from what I heard, this new mini series is going to be the anime production team's project. So it could be action-packed, it could be one huge filler, we'll never know until it's time. All I know is that it is going to be different than the previous series, mainly because Kishimoto has not made this "after generation" into manga. So it will be done completely by the production team.

If there is, it better not be anytime soon. I have to catch up a LOOONNG way.

I doubt there will be any more Arcs, but you never know.

Will probably just be extras or like a child arc, I don't see anything unless they wanna squeeze the title out.

Why would you all post the exact same thing as I did without providing as much information? You going for that post count or something?

Nevertheless I think we've answered OP's question.

I was the only one who submitted a legitimate reply. And it was not the exact same thing, it was more of an "add-on" to what you said.

Your further reply to this thread only results to show that you are the one trying to farm post count.

I think we've answered OP's question.
