Thread: About HF eBooks -- Get Rich Quick schemes for kids?

Chills - November 24, 2014, 5:45 pm

So I'll be the first to admit it. When I was a newbie to HackForums I bought about 4 ebooks and spent more than 80 dollars on them. And how much money did I make? $0. In fact, I never even re-opened the ebooks after the first read through. That was how bad they were. After being a member here for a while and definitely growing into a much more well informed person I've noticed that many other members seem to do the same thing when they first join.

It just seems to be the perfect marketing plan...

On one hand you have Hf members. [Please note I'm not talking about all HF members, just a large number of them] Typically a lot younger than the ebook writers..usually from 13 to 16 surfing the web trying to find out how they can get paid to sit on their computer all day instead of doing it for free like they have been. Probably has no expenses, so willing to invest some money. Or maybe using a parents paypal account. So when they see things like "vouches", "refund option", "make $400 a week" for the low price of $13.99 they'll go for it.

On the other hand we have a trusted HF member. Someone who's built up rep for years and years and has a nice shiny profile with a bunch of awards. Maybe you've got an internet money making gig going on for a little while now and you've made a couple hundred. All you need now is to buy a $7 thread design, get some friends to vouch, and setup an autopay system! Oh, and write the ebook.

This is the dilemma I see. I apologize if you don't agree, I know this isn't true for all ebooks. In fact, I've sold two in the last year that I thought were of pretty high quality but I've decided not to keep selling them recently due to how ebooks and people selling them seem to be these days.

Factørial - November 29, 2014, 11:03 am

I agree, personally bought about 3-4 Ebooks (all being totally garbage) The shiny ass vouches and the money making schemes offered was what made me purchase it in the first place.

Whilst I can agree that most money making eBooks are not the most useful, many eBooks serve as paid tutorials somewhat, and so are very useful and worth purchasing.

Product Pipeline is one of these.

eBooks are the "money makers." They are ways for the maker to get rich, all these groups that condone eBooks don't care about you they only want your money! It's called business. Think of it as a way to legally scam someone I guess.

Scams don't have happy, satisfied customers.

labroca - November 29, 2014, 4:09 pm

If you wisely choose your eBooks and do comprehensive research beforehand, you can make money from them.

I've purchased around three, and have made around $100-200 per each. It also requires a skill most of the time, and some people just don't have that skill.

Got the "Super" Goldmin+ Premium from one guy(50$). It's complete BS.

Even though I have the option for a refund I'm to scared to request it lol. They will always use an excuse. (like in TOS "If I don't feel like paying him pack I won't").

JaimeLannister - November 29, 2014, 11:55 pm

I have never bought one of the money making books (the only way I would believe one would be if maybe the claim was you would make like $15-20/hour and I would still be really skeptical....), I have bought books on methods of doing things though that, while they technically "work" they were things that were very publically available (1 time). Then again I joined this forum at 28. What I would maybe be willing to pay for would be support, but you have to be REAL careful there...for the kids out there to make money in life you have to do one or more of these things:

1. Invest a bit of money (like starting a business...)
2. Invest quite a bit of time (like I said maybe you could get $15/hour doing something that is just labor intensive and maybe could even be online)
3. Take a significant risk physically or legally (there are things you can do for easy money but could also very easily get you in trouble- I'm actually not thinking online although can be true there as well)
4. Yeah, something unique but you would most likely have to think of it yourself or get a truly good find and probably be lucky too (Bill Gates bought MS-DOS pretty cheap but he knew what he was doing and also had financial backing to start a company)....
5. Have significant training (for example if you learn programming, etc. or get a degree in something- this isn't something that happens overnight though (you could study for 9 years, go to medical school, do an internship, and become a doctor- then you could make a lot of money) otherwise everyone would do it.
6. A combination of the things above (here would be an example having to do with here: learn for a while, buy a botnet/exploit pack/VPS or rent a dedicated server(s)(preferably set up to use Tor)/buy or direct traffic/etc., and take the risks involved

But honestly the best ebooks are the free ones that are near 1,000 pages on programming (grabbed ones on HTML/Java, C/C++, and Python programming, and then 7 of them on pentesting w/kali the other day) people often provide links to these here and there are sites specifically for free IT books.....

I have seen people do things to get free products and it worked... I guess it always involved SE of some sort although was not technically illegal. I don't quite get how SE is completely disallowed though when there is a section on ewhoring on the forums (I honestly do feel like SE needs to be defined better- one of the things I do think is really good about HF is that the rules tend to not allow the things that really get people in trouble) I feel like I don't fully understand that one, so I am just very careful and er on the side of caution when it comes to what I post....

I do feel like Nirvaka's ebook is not impossible, he is claiming you will get some free tech products not that you will make all the money you need to support your family from the ebook..... (sorry for a second I posted this on your thread instead of here b/c I followed the link, but I do think that is possible unlike the claims of many other books- I haven't tried it though)

Pretty sure it's 45 days. Anyhow with ebooks it's a gamble, you win some or you lose some. The issue usually is that buyers think purchasing the ebooks and reading it is the only "work" part that they have to do, after that they sit back and check PayPal balance every 30 minutes, when it did not increase they go on an all out rage fest and open a thread how books don't work.

Some do. Don't listen to some of the members on here. Their opinions are very biased and untrue. Legitimate sellers will issue a refund if you put effort in trying the method, cooperate with the seller and don't abuse refunds.

This is very true, well said Sh1eld.

I myself am an upgraded user of Sh1eld's Paylvy service, and it really helps me manage my sales. I'm also soon going to be implementing his additional services so that I can track IPs of readers etc.

If I see that a customer has repeatedly read the eBook, not leaked it, and can chat with me about what they're struggling with, I'd be more than happy to offer them a refund if they bought that package.

I don't know about other sellers, but I know that I play things by the book, pardon the pun.

(Nov 30, 2014 03:02 AM)MaddieW Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Wait, do Ebook owners actually honor the refund option?

The refund option is there just to make buyers feel safe, I myself refunded quite a few people but then again I denied refund for pretty much everyone else. Does it mean I don't honor my policy? No, it means I'm not a fool though, just because there's a refund option it doesn't mean you'll get one 10 minutes after you purchased the product, not that member in particular but anyone else.

Most case scenarios go like this.

1:00 PM - Product delivered.

1:04 PM - Sorry this is hard can i get a refund pls bro i need money back.
1:06 PM - you say you refund, refund me!!!
1:07 PM - Ignore list.

Am I a bad person? No, I even say to them open a dispute knowing they cant win one but if they want to, go ahead though. It's such business though, and unless you play it right people will make you look like a fool.

Now not all customers are idiots though, I had several people who actually tried and due to unforeseen circumstances they were unable to do it right, so I refunded them, why I did that? Cause they wasted their time, and it's more than enough for me to acknowledge. But then you have people whos story goes like this(pretty much everyone tries to pull this off).

Let's say...

1th Nov - Product Delivered.
8th Nov - I need help
8th Nov - I reply asking what they need help with and they ignore my PM.
20th Nov - I want a refund.

Now that's another case scenario where you wont get a refund, pretty much because you refused to use the help you were offered and your main intention was to receive a free product. Do I have sleep disorder because of this? Absolutely not, I did my part of the deal. I could go on all day long, but it's pretty simple. Are you working with me and we somehow fail? Np, you're refunded. Are you ignoring me, not replying, and all of the sudden you want refund? Not gonna happen.

I bought one during my first month on HF and then wised up and never got one again. There is no such thing as a "get rich quick" scheme... there's a reason why most adults make their money through employment. Sure, there are niches you can exploit for decent money but it's nothing when you compare it to actually getting a real job with a college degree.

I can already tell you have bullshit vouches. You don't magically profit off of eBay and make that much money from literally sitting on the computer all day and reading a shitty 10-30 page eBook. Either you have to have a large amount of starting funds to kick off and make your "$250-1000+" a day or you're just full of utter bullshit.

Coming off rude proves you're no more than 16y old, if even 16. In no way I insulted either of you in this thread with my reply so I don't see a reason for insulting me. Truth stands, I never went to college actually, I dropped school at age of 17 which was about 6 years ago. Due to amount of unforeseen circumstances I had nothing else left but to focus all my free time towards internet, hence I can call myself internet marketer without asking for yours or anyone else's permission.

You're yet again correct, but fuck it in no way I requested anyone to post their vouch, if people know me they do vouch but I didn't count most vouches in OP since I don't consider "vouch for my buddy" as a real vouch, hence all you see is from actual customers, most of people you'll see vouching for me is from the time I spent coaching and assisting HF members in MT section, for free obviously. If they want to say thanks, not you or anyone else can argue that.

You're correct, again. You don't magically profit, that stands firm. However with certain effort and assistance you may achieve that goal, truth be told many people failed, mostly due to the fact we're all different, hence you're here shitting on people while others are working. Also, in no shape or form I ever advertised my product as "make 1000$ a day", I dare you to find even a single word of me promising such insane amounts a day. Research on who you're speaking about before you do, makes you look like a fool. And yet again, insults are totally uncalled for.

I can understand there are shit products from your point of view, but talking in general will only bring more harm than good. In the end what you're doing right now is free advertising for all eBook sellers, and if you had slightest clue you'd figure it out by now. Bad feedback is often more beneficial than a good one, that's how much you know about internet marketing.

Hahahahaha sonex buddy no. Go out and get a real job like a normal person. You're not fooling anyone FYI I had a broken leg, I assume every normal human being other than kids like yourself would figure out what "unforeseen circumstance" actually is. Although I'm not sure why most people think we dont actually have a job? I do, I'm working 9-3 to get a sense of being useful to community, and I know plenty more who can afford to make a living online yet they still have a job. Pointless argueing with people who know nothing but post biased opinions and try to twist every single word you quote. sonex is out.

OH FOR THE LOVE OF GOD, KNEW IT.

If I was you, I'd just shut the fuck up right now. Blame the world cause you're a failure.

Almost all money making ebooks are the same on HF... Mostly all CPA and affiliate marketing ebooks just with different sites...

Some ebooks are unique in it's own ways like getting free steam games and others, but apart from that, it's also a lto of social engineering from what I've saw.

A lot of the ebooks that promise $100+ in a couple days say you barely gotta do any work, but in reality you gotta do a load of work to make a couple bucks...

I don't know much about making money online but I think I'd have to say just buying things on sale then reselling them would be the best way to make money. For example, buy an iPad on sale then sell it maybe a week later when the sale is over for more money.

threads like this and raise awareness for Ebooks. Your negative opinions make people want it even more but you're so narrow-minded you're just not able to see through it. Did I say thanks? Sorry, thank you.

You are funny kid :) You bitch and complain about people exposing you for the fraud you are, and then you thank us for it. Talk about narrow minded.

Also, your reputation was really cute! Im not doing anything with MY life? How about attending UCB one year away from receiving my degree? What are you doing again? haha, what a fucking joke.

Also, its hilarious how you are claiming to be a success. You, and I will quote you, "spend all my free time marketing on the internet." You are a fucking joke. Let me give you some advice kid.

Get a degree, get a real job, and make a fucking difference.

You're too damn stupid, Jesus. Let's see who banks most. Internet marketing and your 'real job' ?

I've sold tons and tons of ebooks in my time here, I included that in the thread.

I no longer sell any however. (i easily could begin advertizing again, it just wouldn't feel right.

I wont repeat myself, do not assume in general. As I repeatedly said couple of times I still have a job, main reason is cause if I didnt I'd feel as if I'm useless hence your points from this point forward are useless. I dont need a college though to be smarter than you, sure you have a degree but you're still living in poverty with your UCB bullshit. Do not call me a kid either, I'm probably older than you and most HF teenagers, hence I dont get involved in drama much nor you "exposed me". I was merely asking people not to bullshit when they were doing the same, and proven they are failures.

You as eBook seller should shut the hell up, who are you to judge what's good and what's bad when your sales threads look like they were made by 13y old kid? That's my whole point, you have absolutely no right to warn community just because you're a failure in this business.

I can understand why most people would have problems accepting that online work can bring more money per month than they could ever achieve in "real life". By accepting that fact they become the "idiot" who works hard for mediocre income while some "fat kid" gets 3X his pay by sitting on his ass and participating in LOL contests. Get real people, tons of companies have employees and make huge bank yet they pretty much exist only in virtual world (facebook, yahoo, google, 1000s webhosts, domain providers, CPA/PPD...could go on). You don't want to believe it because you failed so far so everyone else must be a liar otherwise what's the point of your life? Why did you go to college if a high school student is making more money NOW? I understand the feeling, I get that too I really do, for years I've tried to make a stable on line income, I still haven't made it but I will keep hoping that one day it will happen (I have made thousands over the years, but when it's all counted I haven't made anything remotely significant, not even half of some minimum wage). If you guys think that shouting "all books fake, no buy" will make your life better you go right ahead, but just like anything you probably do in your life this will also be completely pointless, e-books will NEVER - EVER be removed from HF. ?
