Ah, its because I let some people get away with $5 donations sometimes.

It's what I do to people asking for spare change in real life anyway.

Might as well make it happen on HF.

And thanks again for giving me the permission to do this Trust.

He is one of the most kind people I met on here, he actually cares about people who don't have that much..
He is buying me l33t and I did not even ask for it, I was reading this thread and only asked for a few extra cents so I could get one step closer towards getting my l33t.
But he insisted on giving me l33t! A very heartwarming person, witch resulted for me that my faith in humanity is once again restored!

This guy deserves some respect and appreciation!

Well the first HF member to donate at least. Which is a really big achievement I think.

HCM is a small time non-profit that I run under my Parent's non-profit. It's funded by me and my friends right now. And we've gotten donations to help handle our needs in real life. But nothing ever from an HF member.

I hope you start something that others will follow.

Great idea. I might donate some money :)

Brute Forcer - August 30, 2015, 10:02 pm

How does this work exactly? Is it btc or paypal?

Basquiat - March 27, 2016, 11:18 pm

Back and around. Hoping to help a few while I'm here.

For those new to the way this goes down.

Just PM me what you need, or post here.

And I'll see about making it happen.

Operating funds are sitting around $200 so its not much, if someone is willing to donate to help out, either with actual cash, or items that would be great.

If you're not able to donate, wearing the signature is great as well.

I've been reading two pages of this Thread, and I'm still at a loss of what this is. It's people helping others with a spare change, in BTC only?

Sure! It happens.

Spanger is service that I started when I first got to HF.

The point at the start was to provide help for people who were losing money in currency exchanges and might need a few dollars paypal to cover a deal.

Then when BTC got big, it became paypal and BTC.

Also, around that time it stopped being just small amounts of dollars it became larger amounts for people wanting to buy presents for girlfriends or start businesses.

Hope that explains things.

I've paid a bunch of fees sending bitcoin from coinbase(they charge a huge transaction fee probably gonna get a new wallet soon)

Can I receive a few dollars(Like $15) cover some of my previous transaction fees?

Honestly fees are so high now I liked it when they were like 6 cents.

The $15 could help me get some netflix accounts I always wanted
