Ang?I - November 29, 2014, 7:22 pm

Kyoto Animation just announced today that the Kyoukai no Kanata movie will become a two part series consisting of Kako-hen (Past) and Mirai-hen (Future). The "past" part will be a recap of the series with added elements that were not featured in the light novels while the "future" movie will be an adaption of the final light novel from the series. Hmm, I'm really looking forward to the movies but not so much the past. More interested in the future.

The movie which takes place in the future will be more interesting than the past. It would most likely explain what happened to her in the ending of the anime which is something I would like to know. Regardless, looking forward to watching them both.

I don't know why but I imagine you pissed yourself when you read the announcement, Angel-senpai.

But seriously, I'm hoping the move is better than the series, series was average for me.

I already pissed myself when the original movie concept was announced. I don't even know what to do now that I'll get to see Mirai in two movies.

I'm not 100% sure, but I think they made that ending up for the anime because the light novel is still going
