Thread: AS15147 DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

Omniscient - December 2, 2014, 1:23 pm

I guess DHS has it's own IP assignment from IANA.

AS15147 DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

I just came across a couple accounts. I wonder what they do here? One is an actual active member with benign activity that's been here around 5 years.

And no, I won't expose them. Not my place to give out personal info of members. I just thought it interesting we have DHS on HF but it doesn't really surprise me.

Pow3r - December 2, 2014, 1:24 pm

Seems that HF is either a place to hunt suspects or a place for their workers to procrastinate in the Lounge... I hope it's the second one, that would be hilarious.

Understalker - December 2, 2014, 1:24 pm

This place is a honey pot for everything.

Omniscient - December 2, 2014, 1:27 pm

Quote:Seems that HF is either a place to hunt suspects

I would assume that for LE/DHS/CIA/FBI HF is just the best place for knowledge about what's happening as any other source. No one should be shocked by that.

Quote:This place is a honey pot for everything.

How can a public obvious place be a honeypot? That's like saying Facebook is using your private info for money...SHOCKER! HF can only expose what you're stupid enough to expose. We're a public forum.

Now would be a great time to start allowing carding on the site!

WRX - December 2, 2014, 1:29 pm

I think they just want to monitor to see if anyone is trying to attack the US's cyber security. Cyber attacks really mess with the psychology of a country so Im assuming its for "security reasons" either that or just bored at work

vicvance20 - December 2, 2014, 1:30 pm

This shouldn't be a problem for anyone as long as no-one confesses cyber crimes here

Programming - December 2, 2014, 1:30 pm

Omni, I think everyone has always known there's been those people on here.

?Jamie - December 2, 2014, 1:30 pm

Well it's obvious there's going to be feds/security people on this forum. Not just to check on malicious activity but maybe to check if anything is being sold here that may be stolen. Like Omni said, anything you say/do on this forum EVERYONE has the rights to view. So it's your own fault if you get into trouble.

I guess the occasional member getting arrested and charged with serious offenses justifies having this place monitored. I can understand why that happens from a LEA point of view.

Kubaa - December 2, 2014, 1:30 pm

Omni what if they are investigating YOU?!

Maybe you are on the most wanted list?!

Genicus - December 2, 2014, 1:32 pm

They are doing what they are suppose to, looking for new trends of hacking and other illegal activities so they can stop it at the source. No one should be that worried

Roary - December 2, 2014, 1:32 pm

Well. The thing is those Anonymous people think you would give out any members info to the feds. That's not for me to judge, it's your site! But thanks for the interesting thread.

They could be FBI trolls, instead of investigating that one member they get bored and make accounts to troll.

Turns out all the exe files claiming to be hacks are really Internet Explorer installation files.

Machiavellian101 - December 2, 2014, 1:56 pm

I seriously think that they would be here for mainly research purposes and nothing more. This is homeland security that deals with national security; they have no time to be dealing with domestics.

'Psyduck - December 2, 2014, 1:57 pm

Homeland security is also known for their dateline NBC: To catch a predator investigation with Chris Hansen. Cyber crimes are what they are hunting. Well, nice to see them here. Hopefully no such big deals are happening here.

Highly doubt it. As someone who works in an IT department, the sites people visit are rarely investigated unless someone reports something about that person, but it could be a different case since it is the government and they could just sniff what sites people are browsing. If they've been browsing HF for years from that location for years, they probably won't get it any kind of trouble for browsing the site.

Too be honest, I don't see why the Department of Homeland Security would be conducting investigations here. They should be using their resources to track down terrorist organizations, and not hackers. They are other organizations for cyber threats, and even then I don't see why hackforums is that much of an interest.
