

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: [\[Nightfall\] L33T Upgrade Contest \[NO SIGNATURE / EASY\]](#)

h?cker22 - December 2, 2014, 2:08 pm

Requirements:

1 week time online

0 Deal Disputes

Entry:

Post what you believe makes a quality member. Which ways do you think a member can contribute to positively impact the community?

Rules:

Your answer must have at least 100 characters.

One post per person. No reserving spots, no useless discussion.

This ends, by the latest, on December the 17th.

Nivarka - December 2, 2014, 3:49 pm

Yet another brilliant giveaway coming from Nightfall. We are the group that keeps on giving.

EgoManiac - December 2, 2014, 5:38 pm

What I believe makes a quality member are the important traits that everyone should strive to improve on which are: actions and having responsibility for all of the actions, Attitude and setting a welcoming environment for new members while respecting the community, and finally being helpful of course; helping new members around the forums while passing on knowledge/wisdom to carry further discussion. Thanks for this contest and good luck to everyone! -EgoManiac

Jessie- - December 2, 2014, 9:18 pm

(Dec 2, 2014 06:38 PM)EgoManiac Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What I believe makes a quality member are the important traits that everyone should strive to improve on which are: actions and having responsibility for all of the actions, Attitude and setting a welcoming environment for new members while respecting the community, and finally being helpful of course; helping new members around the forums while passing on knowledge/wisdom to carry further discussion. Thanks for this contest and good luck to everyone! -EgoManiac

You might wanna reread the requirements

(Dec 2, 2014 03:08 PM)Pali Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Requirements:

1 WEEK ONLINE TIME

0 Deal Disputes

EgoManiac - December 2, 2014, 9:37 pm

(Dec 2, 2014 10:18 PM)Jessie- Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You might wanna reread the requirements I don't understand?

Time Spent Online: 1 Week, 1 Day, 6 Hours, 59 Minutes, 14 Seconds

Deal Disputes: 0

stts510 - December 3, 2014, 5:37 am

Making a better community... Ummm. Well, it's like exactly how we survive in this world, in our neighbourhood. Help each other. What you know, share with others. Don't be mean. And most importantly, be respectful to the people that have been sharing their knowledge from ages. Even if it's a new member, don't insult him. I mean who the hell knows, he could be next generation Omniscient. If you don't be nice and helpful, people will ignore you. If each of us do the same thing, soon enough we will be no different than animals. Fighting, snatching food from each other trying to survive. But we don't just want to survive. Do we?

h?cker22 - December 3, 2014, 7:07 am

Very glad to see interest, even if it's just two members.

Sakuto - December 3, 2014, 8:08 am

I'm not sure what a user really need to be a quality member, but in my honest opinion, two simply things is enough to be a High Quality use

Always share your knowledge : The biggest and best part to help this forum and his community is to always share what you know. For example, if you are good enough in C#, just go in the C# section and always try to answer to the beginner and to people who really need your help. If you are very good in something you can also write tutorial for these things, it's not a waste a time, it will obviously take so time but you'll help tons of people with that time, and you will improve your knowledge in education too. The big difference between High Quality user and normal user when they have both knowledge is something is also simple. Normal user will juste ask payment for any help given, they will never just debug a source code for somebody.

High Quality user will help everybody and will never need or ask for payment, they will just be very gad to the user who give something.

Second big thing is the activity, if you have 2000 posts but they are all in Lounge or "chatting" section, you are not a HQ user in my mind, you are just somebody with lot of time to spend. Same thing for the reputation, if all your rep come from friends who rep you because you are funny, it's not very concordant with the quality of yourself.

And what will impact the community ? As I said in the first point, spend time to help other people by answering their question, or writing tutorial is the best thing to do. Also, if you have old software you made, or just old version of your software, letting the source code for free to beginner user is an awesome thing to them for helping them learning how to do something and how to handle this problem.

By the way, making this kind of contest is also a very good action to improve the quality of this forum :p

(Sorry for my English, I'm French):)

Edit : Someone offer me the uppgade to L33T meanwhile, but I would love to let my letter here, just to see if you agree with me (:

Archives - December 3, 2014, 8:21 am

Nightfall is going great, all members seems cool to me.

Good luck to everyone, I hope there will be UB3R contest too!

Good luck everyone.

He B TeMy - December 4, 2014, 6:55 am

I honestly think the biggest impact a member can have on this (or any) community, is sharing what they know, knowledge is everything, money, belongings and other stuff are all 2nd place's.

If someone doesn't enjoy helping another someone, then no matter how much they'd like to be a "community-member" they would never succeed in passing of someone who has a ton of posts but doesn't really do anything.

I think my point is this, and it proves itself.

h?cker22 - December 4, 2014, 6:57 am

I am truly enjoying the replies, hopefully we get some more.

h?cker22 - December 5, 2014, 1:02 pm

Still open. Show some love and support.

I just wanna love you guys ?

Accelerator. - December 7, 2014, 5:29 am

Post what you believe makes a quality member. Which ways do you think a member can contribute to positively impact the community?

Personally, I believe a quality member is a fair member who doesn't go around being a total douchebag but instead tries to better the forums through helping other members or posting helpful threads. Any member can easily help HF community by helping members in need of help by giving them helpful advice instead of abusing them :)

Jester Race - December 7, 2014, 7:24 am

Why should I be chosen?

First of all, I have spent over 1 month and 1 week online since I joined in mid 2011. I am most active in Health Wise section(Which needs better moderation btw).

I also reached 1000 posts not too long time ago. I was originally going to upgrade in 2012, but my country got IP banned, which was lifted next year.

I am going to contribute to the community by keeping the Health Wise section off the garbage that keeps getting posted there every week, and maybe do giveaways in the future if I get a chance.

Gory - December 7, 2014, 7:59 am

I think lots of things can make a quality member but really, all that one has to be is a decent person to begin with. Certain traits would play their part in all the different sections of the forum. Having a good imagination and sense of humour when posting in The Lounge would never be a bad thing. A member who is helpful and supportive would be perfect in the Personal Life section. Being trustworthy is key to a member who is regularly using the Marketplace. The Graphics section would always welcome some more creativity and skill. They're just some examples of what would impact the different sections positively. I think that anyone sharing their experiences and opinions can add to the forum in a good way. The little things like just following the rules and reporting those who don't matter too. I think that's 100, good luck to everyone!

Sexy Devil - December 7, 2014, 10:49 am

What makes a quality member?

In my opinion a quality member is one who follows the rules and encourages others to do the same. Being polite to others and helping users with their problem. A quality user comes as a guest and stays as a family. ?

How to positively impact the community?

One can contribute to the community with their skills. If you are good at something then sharing the knowledge will help people learn. Giving back on HF could be writing an original method/guide on hacking, monetizing, website, graphics etc., helping others solve their problem, hosting contest to give others an opportunity (like you upgrading me ?) or even donating directly to the community. I consider obeying the site rules as giving back as it makes work easier for the forum team.

Thanks.. ?

Congratulation to anyone who wins! ?

h?cker22 - December 9, 2014, 6:09 pm

Less than 10 days left. Loving the apps so far.

Louis C.K. - December 9, 2014, 6:56 pm

I want this upgrade because I would like the ability to edit my own post on the forum. I've HQ tuts ideas waiting to be shared on the forum, but without the editing function, I can't edit thread after posting. I am a great contributor to the community, always generous and offering helpful hints. If I get chosen, I will be sure to continue to post more tuts on various topics. Check out this last one I wrote myself, a few things to be edited but access was denied.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4528752>

pcheetah - December 9, 2014, 10:37 pm

oh yeh? I'm a professional jack forums member with -3 rep of autism and I do deals and never got reported it disputed yet so im not a scammer dood

zombieman - December 10, 2014, 9:57 pm

I'll make mine simple, but good

1. Following all the rules.
2. Acting kind towards other members.
3. Contributing to the site with tutorials, giveaways, and just by posting. People don't realize how much a post/thread really means to the community. If no one posted, HackForums wouldn't exist.

h?cker22 - December 12, 2014, 12:03 pm

5 more days till this is over. I keep forgetting this is live because of the little responses.

Lines - December 12, 2014, 5:58 pm

I'm not gonna sit here and kiss ass, so I'll just be straight up.

I believe I am a high quality member because I always try to keep my posts HQ. Occasionally, just like every other HF member I do troll a bit, but who doesn't right? I have posted several [HOT] TuT's on all sorts of things and I always try to give back to the community by helping people out, whether it's something small or something huge. To positively impact the community I believe a member should follow the rules of course, keep their posts HQ, and just try to help others in anyway they can.

Anyways, good luck everyone.

::TroJan:: - December 12, 2014, 6:37 pm

Hello. Pali

If a member want to be HQ. He must help others with the things he know. He must not troll in serious posts. Also keep his posts hq. Try to give back to the community , help new members , must not be rude to other members. Also help the mods and the admins by reporting infected links, members that break the rules ...etc. try to alert the community from scammers . HQ member must not use his reputation to scam new members. About me im trying to be more hq and im trying to help the community in anyway.

Any member can contribute to the community for example if he was searching the web and he found a website that is giving free steam he can share it with forum members and let them get the game. He can also contribute to the community by other ways like helping members, answering questions there is too many ways if a member want to contribute he will find the way :D

Anyway good luck everyone and thanks for the giveaway
Kind regards

DisguiserNET - December 13, 2014, 5:46 pm

I'm not sure what a user really need to be a quality member, but in my honest opinion, two simply things is enough to be a High Quality use

Always share your knowledge : The biggest and best part to help this forum and his community is to always share what you know. For example, if you are good enough in C#, just go in the C# section and always try to answer to the beginner and to people who really need your help. If you are very good in something you can also write tutorial for these things, it's not a waste a time, it will obviously take so time but you'll help tons of people with that time, and you will improve your knowledge in education too. The big difference between High Quality user and normal user when they have both knowledge is something is also simple.

Normal user will juste ask payment for any help given, they will never just debug a source code for somebody.

High Quality user will help everybody and will never need or ask for payment, they will just be very gad to the user who give something.

Second big thing is the activity, if you have 2000 posts but they are all in Lounge or "chatting" section, you are not a HQ user in my mind, you are just somebody with lot of time to spend. Same thing for the reputation, if all your rep come from friends who rep you because you are funny, it's not very concordant with the quality of yourself.

And what will impact the community ? As I said in the first point, spend time to help other people by answering their question, or writing tutorial is the best thing to do. Also, if you have old software you made, or just old version of your software, letting the source code for free to beginner user is an awesome thing to them for helping them learning how to do something and how to handle this problem.

By the way, making this kind of contest is also a very good action to improve the quality of this forum :p

Ludicolo - December 14, 2014, 5:02 am

(Dec 13, 2014 06:46 PM)aw3s0m3 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm not sure what a user really need to be a quality member, but in my honest opinion, two simply things is enough to be a High Quality use

Always share your knowledge : The biggest and best part to help this forum and his community is to always share what you know. For example, if you are good enough in C#, just go in the C# section and always try to answer to the beginner and to people who really need your help. If you are very good in something you can also write tutorial for these things, it's not a waste a time, it will obviously take so time but you'll help tons of people with that time, and you will improve your knowledge in education too. The big difference between High Quality user and normal user when they have both knowledge is something is also simple.

Normal user will juste ask payment for any help given, they will never just debug a source code for somebody.

High Quality user will help everybody and will never need or ask for payment, they will just be very gad to the user who give something.

Second big thing is the activity, if you have 2000 posts but they are all in Lounge or "chatting" section, you are not a HQ user in my mind, you are just somebody with lot of time to spend. Same thing for the reputation, if all your rep come from friends who rep you because you are funny, it's not very concordant with the quality of yourself.

And what will impact the community ? As I said in the first point, spend time to help other people by answering their question, or writing tutorial is the best thing to do. Also, if you have old software you made, or just old version of your software, letting the source code for free to beginner user is an awesome thing to them for helping them learning how to do something and how to handle this problem.

By the way, making this kind of contest is also a very good action to improve the quality of this forum :pWhy did you copy someones post on the first page?

STR™ - December 14, 2014, 5:04 am

You are doing the giveaway at right time buddy , you gonne reach 10k post on your profile :D

"ITS TIMES for NIGHTFALL to Rule on HF" amit007 - December 14, 2014, 5:44 am

I wanna upgrade because i had and can contribute to the Hacking community.. i had already posted some nice ebook's for Newbie's who are new to Hacking and i will continue to do this because i like supporting and helping other's.

As far as L33t is concerned it will give me more opportunities to contribute to the community by having some more authority's.

Thank you.

NoMercy - December 14, 2014, 6:34 am

Without question there is many different ways to be a high quality member but some of the key ways to be a high quality member and act like a high quality member is the following:To be professional yet entertaining. Many members I see today on hack forums are either one nor both or just non at all. Professionalism is required to make sure people are learning on hack forums and assuring that the site looks high quality too. Professionalism is almost the key to learning as it provides an person with the essential learning points they need and someone that is professional will not half-ass a post with rubbish graphics and say "That will do" which in turn makes the forums more High quality. I also mentioned entertaining which is a key point because if someone is droning on or just copy and pasting their work it is usually boring and people stop reading half way through and just leave it.

To know what you are talking about. Now this is a key part of being a high quality member because i see people all the time talking about things they don't have a clue about. Yes everyone is allowed an opinion but if it's going to make yourself look stupid, you should keep it to yourself. This can also aid in the learning environment that HF is. If people think they know what they are talking about and they just blag their way through everything then no one is going to learn correctly and their methods will be incorrect.

To be friendly and not rep someone down just for talking to you. In the recent weeks I've seen people rep people down or just flame someone because they spoke to them as a regular member. I can't see why you would need to degrade someone to make yourself feel better and i'm sure all high quality members feel the same. If all members wasn't like this we would have a lot better environment in HF. Not saying it's an awful environment but sometimes be people re scared of getting flamed.

Thank you for reading,
have a nice day:Blackhat:

HAX ME IM FAMOUS - December 14, 2014, 6:37 am

Glad to see another Nightfall giveaway, goodluck to all participants.

muppy - December 14, 2014, 6:41 am

First of all, I'd like to say thank you so much for hosting this giveaway, I appreciate everything Nightfall does for HF.

I try my best to be HQ, although I do make mistakes (who doesn't?)

Although I probably don't have the biggest chance in winning this giveaway, I'm still going to enter. I'm always thinking of ways to help the community, I've done giveaways such as: PayPal giveaways, free graphics, E-Book reviews and probably more, idk though.

Vinnie is the sexiest black cat on HF.

Package is a retarded cunticle (idk y)

Sakuto - December 14, 2014, 4:22 pm

(Dec 13, 2014 06:46 PM)aw3s0m3 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm not sure what a user really need to be a quality member, but in my honest opinion, two simply things is enough to be a High Quality use

Always share your knowledge : The biggest and best part to help this forum and his community is to always share what you know. For example, if you are good enough in C#, just go in the C# section and always try to answer to the beginner and to people who really need your help. If you are very good in something you can also write tutorial for these things, it's not a waste a time, it will obviously take so time but you'll help tons of people with that time, and you will improve your knowledge in education too. The big difference between High Quality user and normal user when they have both knowledge is something is also simple.

Normal user will just ask payment for any help given, they will never just debug a source code for somebody.

High Quality user will help everybody and will never need or ask for payment, they will just be very gad to the user who give something.

Second big thing is the activity, if you have 2000 posts but they are all in Lounge or "chatting" section, you are not a HQ user in my mind, you are just somebody with lot of time to spend. Same thing for the reputation, if all your rep come from friends who rep you because you are funny, it's not very concordant with the quality of yourself.

And what will impact the community ? As I said in the first point, spend time to help other people by answering their question, or writing tutorial is the best thing to do. Also, if you have old software you made, or just old version of your software, letting the source code for free to beginner user is an awesome thing to them for helping them learning how to do something and how to handle this problem.

By the way, making this kind of contest is also a very good action to improve the quality of this forum :pFunny, it's my message :D Prood to be copied <3

Indus - December 15, 2014, 5:09 am

Basically I am a RAT expert. I want to help people on this community want them to learn hacking.

My father used to me that if you want to learn you must give your knowledge to someone. Actually I am bit selfish want to learn something that's why spreading my knowledge. See my reputation its low but all say that i am rally helpful

I haven't completed my 1 week ,sorry for that but i really want to upgrade. There are lot of things that only upgraded members can do. I want to do that & so helping the community.

ProxyTM - December 15, 2014, 11:32 am

I'd like to enter this contest!

I'd like to be upgraded due to I can be online more and try to help people out, and maybe becoming a support on someones website? (Can be almost any website that has a req support), Not much information but I don't really know what to say when I haven't really experienced the feeling about being an upgraded member on here! Anyways, good luck to everyone who's entering contest!

h?cker22 - December 16, 2014, 11:24 am

(Dec 4, 2014 07:55 AM)HeBTeMy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I honestly think the biggest impact a member can have on this (or any) community, is sharing what they know, knowledge is everything, money, belongings and other stuff are all 2nd place's.

If someone doesn't enjoy helping another someone, then no matter how much they'd like to be a "community-member" they would never succeed in passing of someone who has a ton of posts but doesn't really do anything.

I think my point is this, and it proves itself.

The winner is this guy here, I have just sent the payment for your upgrade.

Sakuto - December 16, 2014, 11:35 am

Damn, was telling the same thing with more details and did not win :(Congrat Hebtemy

He B TeMy - December 16, 2014, 11:42 am

(Dec 16, 2014 12:24 PM)Pali Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The winner is this guy here, I have just sent the payment for your upgrade.

Thank you man !! Seriously appreciated !

I already replied to your PM ;)

So happy, let me enjoy the new color :D

Edit: Can't wait for it ! Damn you 48h limit ...

(Dec 16, 2014 12:35 PM)Sakuto Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Damn, was telling the same thing with more details and did not win :(Congrat Hebtemy

Thanks ;)