Giving away $5 btc to a random person via their post number by using random.org

I ask you to simply answer the question below to qualify for this contest. You don't have to be correct.

If you are asked to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth and you are the main witness, what if you say "no"?

Winner: Fights

SIM-1166170 - December 4, 2014, 10:13 pm

I would guess mr judge would hold you in contempt or dismiss you idk

Trisomy 21 - December 4, 2014, 10:18 pm

It depends upon if you are white or not.

That doesn't mean that you(I) won't tell the truth.

Just don't agree with telling the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

FluMist - December 4, 2014, 10:24 pm

You can be held in contempt of the court and potentially be sentenced to jail time if you are summoned by a subpoena.

brian188246 - December 4, 2014, 10:32 pm

I would agree with some other and say held in contempt.
Thanks for the giveaway. LMK if I win

Sakuto - December 5, 2014, 1:30 am

Only your moral will tell you what to do (:

DeltaForce103 - December 5, 2014, 2:11 am

You're refusing to cooperate and will face whatever penalties that exist. Nothing more.

If you are asked to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth and you are the main witness, what if you say "no"?

Auto guilty.

Tuxedo - December 5, 2014, 5:02 am

You would be held in contempt of the court, and could be subject to detainment. It would not be a wise move.

It's mandatory to comply and take the oath in a court though only if you've received a subpoena demanding you to appear in court. Secondly, a 'witness' is required to answer any questions, to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Rigel - December 5, 2014, 6:06 am

I'm in if this contest is still going.

Lying under oath is illegal and will get you problems if you are caught. If you refuse to do the oath, then I think everything you say must have some kind of proof or something.

Aversator - December 5, 2014, 7:45 am

As previously stated, depends on your gender and race.

Cyrus - December 5, 2014, 7:46 am

"If you are asked to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth and you are the main witness, what if you say "no"?"

I'd assume you wouldn't be allowed to testify at that point, probably get held in contempt, even so would there not be some use of cross-examination or redirection to get a "whole truth" even without your yes? I understand you are the "main witness" but there'd have to be other ways to get to a "whole truth" in that scenario, given that said I don't live in the US so I don't know how it would work over there.

MysticParadox - December 5, 2014, 4:48 pm

I don't know, I have never seen anybody say no. The judge/whoever would probably dismiss you or ask if they heard you correctly since typically someone would say yes.

Sinq - December 5, 2014, 7:48 pm

Saying no will cause the big bang theory and the world will change instantly.

I like free money also, thanks.

SIM-2015410 - December 5, 2014, 8:08 pm

I assume the jury would not hold your testimony as strong evidence. Perhaps you would just be dismissed. But you could lie and say yes anyway, so not sure it would make a difference. In fact, it may make you MORE trustworthy haha.

Floor - December 5, 2014, 8:11 pm

Nothing would happen

Good luck to all.

6-5-306. Refusal to appear or testify; avoidance of service; penalties; summary proceedings for contempt.

iii. Refuses to take an oath or affirmation or, being sworn or affirmed, refuses to answer a question required by the court or presiding officer.

So, obviously, you'll just be punished.

Saying no would nullify your action in the case, and the jury would be put to work in analyzing 3rd party evidence.

You may or may not be enforced with the full power of the law.

If I win, can you please PM me? Thank you.
