Thread: Polymath | End of an Era | Sale | BTC/WU | BIN: \$7,000

ida - December 7, 2014, 5:20 am

BIN: $7,500 (BTC or Western Union)

As I already told the rest of the Polymath members, I no longer have time to be as active as necessary to run a group on Hackforums. School, work, social life, and hobbies have been catching up with me, and I only see myself getting more busy as time goes. Therefor, I have decided to sell Polymath.

I will be offering to sell the rights to run Polymath if you are interested. However, I will have to sort of "accept" you first, as I am not interested in selling the Polymath name to someone who will destroy the name in no time.

Polymath is a well respected group, and it always receives high ratings on "favorite group". We have managed to keep activity and have well-respected members in the group, which are a few of the reasons that people see Polymath as a great group. Our members are, as said, very active. We just had an interview with Omniscient in the first radio show, a great and huge AI-chatbot giveaway which got 2400 posts in 24 hours, and there was 2 other projects being planned/almost done.

There is also a great potential to start Polymath group products, as there are none and haven't been any for a long time. I would do this myself, but I no longer have time for any of this. I already have a job which is out for Hackforums, which is my main focus. You also need to keep in mind that new groups tend to fail, which is why purchasing Polymath is a great opportunity.

Please stay on topic. If you have any questions, send me a private message.

Quote from inside the sub-forum:

(Dec 7, 2014 06:01 AM)Robust Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Whoever buys it has a lot to carry on. Polymath has been defined as a great group, and honestly we've brought a lot to the table here at HF, to the point where people copy off our ideas. We don't release worthless projects, but when we release a project, we have huge amounts of popularity. Chat bots, radio, interviews. Polymath is a great group. It's worth the money.

Take care.

It's sad to see such a great group go.. It seems like groups are going up for sale on a weekly basis now, it's depressing.

I know. It saddens me too. I believe my time on Hackforums is nearing its end, and I have to let someone who is more active to run the group. I will not sell the group to any idiot, if they wish to continue with Polymath.

Let's be honest now. Whoever buys the group will re-brand it, buy a shit userbar that people want, sell spots, and then sell the group. And this process will repeat.

No, they shouldn't. The Revolution and Titans is a perfect example of how new groups work here. Even Specialists, try their best to be HQ and they're new, but people don't respect them enough for it. I'm sure the buyer will want to continue Polymath. And we won't sell it to someone who is too much of an idiot to keep it at how Lani, Sh1eld, Crypto and myself, as well as our entire member base have made it to date, only better.

Groups never reached 18k the highest they went I think was 9k when one was sold for that, just because someone put a price tag for 18k does not mean that was the value the value is what it was last sold at.

Most people buy groups to benefit from them. They usually benefit from buy-ins, leadership spots, group products, and such. Most group owners tend to earn their money back that they spent on the group.

Trust me when I say this, Lani had big plans for Polymath, and they stretched out for months and months at least. We had a nice plan and flow going on, and we were expanding. Honestly, he doesn't have time. Life catches up to all of us, and honestly, it's time people start reprioritising what's important to them. Why do you think Lani would want to sell a group that's been defined as a success, not just for us but for a lot of members in the community.

The transition between groups just represents the name associated with the group. If you were to look at Enterprise you would see many group changes which would all be under the same owner, Astonish. Specialists, Null, and The Brotherhood are examples of groups that were purchased and the ownership was transferred.

No, but Polymath is all said groups rebranded.

Just for you young one - <http://www.collinsdictionary.com/dictionary/english/rebranding>

They were said groups that changed their 'image' or direction if you will.

They are th same entity in terms of group number, owner and all that. Just a new direction.

I would agree that Black diamonds didnt get rebranded as it was a completely different owner but the fact that Lani after he got the group had the option to get the group image but instead wanted to change it, can also count as a rebrand.

This is sad news to hear.

I've been taking some time off from HackForums to fix some unfortunate events in my life.

However, when I finished, I had every intention to come back with the aspirations of learning, as well as joining.

I feel as if I may be in a somewhat similar situation, in regards to RL things eating up the time you have. I hope you find a buyer worthy of Polymath. It seems like a stellar group, and some of the members that I know of in the group are way awesome.

I hope I can find my way back to spending time on HF when my stuff has been taken care of. I hope that Polymath won't be sold by then, but if it does get sold, I hope it's still going to be just as amazing (or more. Just not less amazing).

Definitely one of the most interesting groups I've ever seen, though. Way cool contests.

Polymath wasn't really broken, Lani is extremely busy right now and unable to provide a stable ownership from his end, and thinks it's in the best interest for a sale. He did have other plans for the group, hence the introduction of Crypto and I, but a lot of us in the group are busy. It's a busy time of the year.

The guy named Basquiat however is the same guy who wanted to buy my group for 8K and 2 weeks later backed out aswell.

Same guy who was trying to buy Polymath, he really keeps making a fool of himself as i knew this would happen. Not blaming anybody, I'm actually just curious as to whether Trust scammed anybody or not before he took off. Given the situation with the group I thought it might be a possibility that he had done something like that. Glad to hear he didn't though. ?

I'm pretty sure phoenix got sold for 6.5k considering Understalker bought it (made a thread saying he wanted to buy a group for 6.5k).

This is 1k less than Lani's asking for, so it's going to take a bit longer to sell :P

False.

Essentially, it's being purchase for the same as, if not more than Polymath.

Someone will come along and purchase it, it just takes time.

I was too, a lot of people were. ? Hopefully no hate comes from this, Basquiat is a really cool guy and I understand the reason for backing out. Yeah he's already backed out on the purchase of Revolution, but he was too busy to make the purchase which is understandable.

The reason he/we backed out is because our friend, Trust, got doxed by someone on the site and his family was being harassed and his mom wanted him off of the site so he listened to her, his family is more important than HF. The group was really only happening because of Trust. Basquiat promised him the group, but we both woke up to seeing him banned for 6 months. I wasn't originally supposed to be a part of it but we all became friends and they wanted me to be a part of it. Basquiat even offered to give me $3.5k to find a partner to purchase the group but I decided not to do that because I feel like the friendship would have been bought and I don't want that kind of friendship/partnership.

Anyways, hopefully Craft will become something some day. Maybe not with the same name, but the idea of the group and the plans that we had. ?

Once again, I'm sorry, Lani.

Let me tell a little story here,

You have your people who like to cause scenes and really try to make a name for themselves by making statements and claims how they can afford to buy a group, those are the types that flaut and pretend to be "wealthy" enough to buy a group. It's honestly pathetic.

If you really want to buy a group you do it with class and you directly talk to the owner ask him the price and negotiate, if the price meets your budget, good. If not you wish him the best of luck and you move on.

Don't come up with that " Oh I have to wait for my allowance type of bullshit " or " I will make a bank loan on wednesday " cause we all know you're unemployed and it will get denied like the virgin you are.

#MoneyTalks.

You have to be approved to own a group, which starts with being an Ub3r member.

However, hypothetically, if you bought this (and were Ub3r, accepted for group ownership, etc.) it would be completely 'acceptable.'

Lani, why don't you give the group to someone, like to lead it for free. See how they run it, and if they're a good leader, just let them run it, if not, keep rotating with new leaders(month wise) until you find a buyer. I'm sure Errors will get the money, maybe not within the hour but maybe in a year or so? Till then, you can test out new potential leaders, would be a cool idea till you find a buyer that doesn't fall through.

Wrong. I was purchasing the group and Lani alerted me that he had gotten an offer for BTC instant and it was well over my bid and the bidder was firm. I then let him know I wasn't going to be able to outbid him so I bought a truck for my 18th birthday ?

And Coinbase didn't fall through, they just wanted so much from me because I have a spending limit as a Youth Bank user (Was 17 when purchased were made).

Vinnie only owns Nightfall, Nobility owns Null but Vinnie bought it from what I understand. Omni doesn't allow people to own more than one group. If Nobility wanted to, he could remove Vinnie as a leader, change the group, etc. and Omni wouldn't care though Vinnie might be a little pissed lol.

If Vinnie wanted to rebrand Nightfall as Illuminati that's fine as Omni approved it I believe. But I think Omni only allows that because Vinnie owns Nightfall, he wouldn't be able to own Polymath and would have to have a friend be the owner.

I don't like that members cannot purchase more than one group, now the group is just sitting around doing nothing when other people like myself or Vinnie could purchase this group and make something out of it.

I mean what does Omni have to lose from this? If anyone goes out of line we would risk having the groups removed by Omni.. the punishment is more than fair right? ( the goon Anonymouse thought he could get away with whatever he did, he got both his groups removed and justice was served. )

Is it because it wouldn't be fair for others to have a chance and purchase a group? Because as far as I see.. there is nobody with enough money to buy one.

Now the owner of polymath cannot make the sale either because of that rule.. not fair right? the dude has been waiting Many months.

Is it because it wouldn't be fair for others to have a chance and purchase a group? Because as far as I see.. there is nobody with enough money to buy one.

Now the owner of polymath cannot make the sale either because of that rule.. not fair right? the dude has been waiting Many months.

Because if this was allowed only a few members would own all the groups and they would basically run all of HF. Obviously HF is its own separate world with its own separate economy but monopolization is a real world offense and stops companies from dominating a market, allowing for others to run a business and earn for themselves. If everything was owned by Google how shitty would that be?

On top of that imagine if we had a situation where Vinnie, yourself or 'x' member was banned and closed for rule breaking and the 4 groups they owned were just gone. Imagine how much of an upset this would cause and how much work Omni would need to do to just settle everyone down.

This is why I'm openly against Vinnie or anyone buying and leading several groups. He's obviously a very smart lad and has made himself lots of money along with having so much reputation and power within HF, but it would honestly suck if only one or two people here owned all the groups.

Simple answer is, if it hasn't sold yet, maybe Lani is valuing the group and too high a price?

The site would get boring if 2 people or even 1 owned all the groups.

I really don't see a single valid reason here, maybe it's just me.

How is it different from somebody funding a random member to buy a group for a current owner that has already one group? ( to circumvent the rule )

At least Omni would know who purchased the second group if it was allowed.

Also this has nothing to do with things being fair, this is a business and owning a group is an investment whether you like it or not. ( if groups were for shits and giggles they wouldn't cost 7K )

Anyway not trying to go off topic, GWLS Lani I hope you get it sold soon.

Nothing is currently stopping people from doing this but I'm sure if Omni got wind of this with real, legitimate proof he wouldn't be happy, or he wouldn't care if the guy who is the pseudo-leader scammed and kept the group himself.

But if you really thought of things being a business and investment then you should know Monopolization shouldn't be allowed.

I also never said a group was for 'shit and giggles'. Please don't put those words in my mouth. Groups are one of the most important things on HF.

Aren't groups all about that though, Exclusivity and having that special right of being in a certain group?

An owner purchases a group to 'dominate' and 'exclude' others from being in it? ( would that not be monopolization as well? )

It's hackforums lol I don't see it to be that serious, but I understand your point.

I wouldn't say owning a group is to dominate, when I see a member owning a group I don't think he's here to dominate but more to provide users an experience of a community; albeit the exclusivity is a main selling point.

All in all my main point is that forcing a leader to only own one groups means other people have to step up and this allows users to provide new and exciting ideas. Fresh faces means fresh ideas and the possibility for a more diverse Hackforums.

If you owned 3 groups you could blacklist every other group, member, etc. and not just your group would be in the drama it'd be 3. If you closed, all 3 groups are gone. Too much power over the groups. People like you simply trying to make money off of groups without actually caring to make it of decent quality, etc.

The only exception I could see is if you had to be approved per group you owned so that way you couldn't buy the group and did like you did with Revolution/Fortune. But then if somebody made their first group decent Omni might approve them for a second, or even third group.
Also like Happeh said, different owners brings new ideas.

Spot on.
I would love to see Omniscient take this approach towards people trying to own multiple groups. Look at the quality of their first group, then decide if they should own a second.

If every single group owner had the mentality to only run the group as a business I would be very scared to see how that would turn out. Groups were originally free (The Wraith, The Alliance, and so on) and were meant to support the community. Yes, buying a group (now) can be considered as an investment but you have to keep in mind they were never intended to be that way. It was only when Omni allowed people to buy custom groups for 2k that people (like Astonish for example) saw the amount of profit that could be made from owning a group.

If you have something to input to the sale or have interest, go for it. but if not keep your fighting somewhere else.

Also, few pages back I saw some people confused with the illuminati change, group purchase thing. Let me clear;

Vinnie was going to change Fortune into Illuminati, it got approved but later to be declined.

(Apr 19, 2015 04:53 PM)Jerv Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Also, few pages back I saw some people confused with the illuminati change, group purchase thing. Let me clear;

Vinnie was going to change Fortune into Illuminati, it got approved but later to be declined.

Vinnie is buying Polymath (hope he still is) to make a different group.

Thanks :) this is as useful as your guide on how to become group owner!!
