Why even bother posting this without a source, normal people don't want simple stuff like this on here... Especially not when there are already a thousand of them

Lexica - December 19, 2014, 8:28 am

Some people just like to share what they've made no reason to bash them. Jeez ignorant people these days.

Does this use Skype4COM or just the sendkey enter method?

If you do not have .NET Framework 4.5 installed then this program won't work.

I do have .Net 4.5 installed
It's obvious whats going wrong, just bad code management simple debugging will help you figure out whats going wrong, hell I don't even have the source code and I know whats wrong.

Rhez - December 19, 2014, 3:10 pm

AHAHAHA.

.NET Framework is not the problem there , buddy :)

Mhm.

Code Skype.SendMessage(Me.TextBox2.Text, Me.TextBox1.Text)
SendKeys.Send("{ENTER}")
label3.Text = Cdbl(label3.text) + 1

OP has decided to still use SendKeys for some reason. Oh and this is in a tick event.

Using a decompiler, you can view the source of a .NET assembly providing it hasn't been obfuscated.

Your friend didn't code it very well, it's trying to use Skype without checking if it's even been allowed access to the Skype client yet, that's why it gets that error. Just simple things like that, and knowing that it doesn't even check to see if it's allowed access it makes me wonder what else is coded incorrectly.
