NETExplorer - December 22, 2014, 11:51 am

I present to you, Netheme:
<http://positron.pw/netheme/>

Simple enough, right?
Check it out!

A submit feature is currently being tweaked, there were some issues with it

If one of your themes is on the website, and you want it removed, send me a PM and we will deal with it.

Leave your feedback!

You mean you used bootstrap, right?

In that case, you didn't do all the CSS and HTML.

You will see when it's pushed online

Most of those guys, I don't really talk to, other than in the section, even if that

I found the themes I deemed that had the most quality, and threw them up on a site for easy access

I'm pretty aware of that already, just a little bit curious as always.

Anyways, are you guys going to add any other themes rather than your own ones? For me, it looks like the only themes you've added so far is based on the people you talk to. Those people know how to create perfect themes like Hawk HF.

This is meant for .NET themes. Pat already has a system for submitting themes. It just needs to be revamped. People will be able to submit their themes if wanted.

You should make the name of the creator clickable and it would link to their HF profile.

I was thinking of doing that, but for some reason during development I never got to it

I've sent you a PM

Well done lads ?. I started on a similar "application" a month ago but I got sidetracked. I was going to build it using Angular and use GH Pages for hosting - I hoped for users to submit themes via a pull request, not unlike this website for Jekyll themes.

If I could offer you some constructive feedback, the styles are a little botched - each menu item appears "active" and the responsive grid appears broken on small view ports. I also think it would be nice if when you clicked an image, the image would enlarge - PhotoSwipe works really nicely for this.

I was waiting for someone to point those things out :P

The menu items are both active for the moment, and the grid doesn't size down for smaller view ports on purpose

I will also look into photswipe, seems like a nice addition

I will fix it eventually ?

You may need theme base for some of the themes. Or you forgot to build your project.

If people are having problems, they should stop worrying about themes and learn the god damn language

There's a nice, clear, blue popup at the top of the page if the theme needs the themebase

For example:
