Thread: \(Help\) For security reasons your account is temporarily locked \(Facebook\)

So yeah, I'll be completely honest. I am in the process of jacking someones facebook and I have gotten access to their email in order to recover the facebook account. Once I changed the password, it said it needed to verify my identity by either identifying the following people in the photos or upload an ID and wait for them to review and confirm it.

Is there any method of bypassing this?

If there isn't any, then I guess my last option is to photoshop a state ID card and upload it to confirm the identity.

This is to protect the account as they have realized something is going on beyond the website security system. The only way is by uploading proof. So i hope youre good with Photoshop lol

You can just guess the people? I've done it a few times and actually got lucky.

It's quite simple if it asks you to identify your friends, login to facebook on another browser(one that isn't locked) & then depending on the following:

- 1)they have very few friends.
- 2)they have a lot of friends.

If it's 1, then search through their friend's list for the correct one.

If it's two, search the choices facebook gives you.

You can try searching the images on google or photoshop ID

Facebook gives you a certain time limit. I was able to complete it correctly but, I took too long.
