Hello, I want to run a teamspeak 3 server for me and my clan and everyone says its cheaper to get a vps and run the teamspeak off a vps rather than paying someone to do that for me. Can you help me out with id go about doing that?

Hi Celeozy,

In order to install Ts3 by yourself which I would suggest, simply follow this tutorial:

REQUIRED OS: CentOS 7 (64 Bit)

<http://l2citadel.com/forums/topic/332-install-teamspeak-3-server-on-centos-7/>

Please let me know if you run into errors, it should be simply copy + pasting but errors can come as we are humans. Thank you!

Hi Gonzalez,

Have you disabled the windows firewall yet? If not disable it and see if that does the trick, if that's the case simply add an exception for TS3 in your firewall. Thank you.

Already disabled it, no luck. I've also tried restarting the server, no luck.

Edit; How do I go about port-forwarding on the VPS?

Hey, is this a windows VPS? If so you're going to need some router information, I don't believe that your host will allow that.

Regardless:

CMD as admin > ipconfig

Look for " Default Gateway " and that should be your router web page IP. Put that IP in your web browser and a web page should pop up, try the default " admin " " admin " or " admin " " password " logins if not try asking your host.

It depends on what OS you have, as well as what webserver you are running. Once you get your webserver up and running you would transfer your website files over to the web root directory of your webserver. Let us know what OS and web server you are using.

Hi, For sure. I'd suggest the following:

Virtualmin - <http://www.virtualmin.com/>

Ajenti - <http://ajenti.org/>

I personally find Ajenti the best out of the above.

I personally find it very powerful but it's not very appealing to the eye. It looks like it was built in 2001, whereas if you compare it with current cPanel's it's way better in terms of function and usage but yea not the best with CSS and design :).

Explain Your Problem In Detail:

I've recently bought two VPS servers one at digitalocean and one at serverhub, I wish to have my WP website, gamecp panel and boxbilling (or a different billing thing) and mail on one and the other vps has two websites.

I set them up both identically, they both have sentora installed but the DNS managment is different, The digitalocean sets up DNS on their panel and the other VPS sets up DNS on the sentora (or cpanel) options.

Both of the servers have working webmail but It won't let me set it up on my mobile and thunderbird.

I mainly wish to fix the mail stuff but would like some pointers since I'm brand new to the whole linux and server thing.

Does your servers have the needed ports open for mail? Are you connecting via POP3 or IMAP?

Not familiar with sentora, but if you have the dns configured correctly, and the webserver is recieving and sending mail from the panel, then you probably have your firewall blocking the ports for IMAP, POP3. Make sure the following ports are open:

Code 110

465

585

993

995

In addition I would also make sure your DNS is correctly configured (DNS configuration for mail servers is very important). If you are using the same domain for both VPS' then you would need to put the appropriate DNS records. There are tutorials for basic DNS configuration found here.

Hi, sometimes the cause is your mail server is only operating on localhost. Have you set the public IP in the mail client as well as opened all ports? Thanks.

Hi,

Unfortunately most people on the internet feel the same way, most websites are scams / take months to deliver, I'd suggest contacting a host on HF and offering them something in return for a free server. Thanks.

Well, do you happen to know which hosts are willing to listen for my offer?? and which ones do you suggest I try with first? I don't know anyone around yet, still a fresh start.

Edit:

Do you know if there are free VPS that I can get by getting "referrals"?? I happen to have tons of VPN so I can create couple fake accounts just for the sake of getting VPS.
