(Jan 1, 2015 07:02 AM)Yani Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Thanks for sharing. But it costs 15$ after a year tho. You can cancel recurring payments in your PayPal account.

Then the next year you buy the domain at a different provider for $1 again :smile;

Handsome Banana - January 1, 2015, 6:04 am

Thanks for sharing man! This is a great offer!

Krew - January 1, 2015, 6:12 am

(Jan 1, 2015 07:10 AM)Yani Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Don't they just park the domain in their name?

Well, sometimes they do. Depends per registrar. Takes a few weeks to 3 months before they drop the domain. It's worth the wait imho, but that depends on you, the buyer, what you are going to use the domain for.

True, however that is the same for NetworkSolutions and some other registrars.

Retaw - January 1, 2015, 5:34 pm

Even those this is old as shit, you forgot to add free private register is on 1and1.

Zedo - January 2, 2015, 1:09 am

I never had a good deal with them, only damn problems, but good luck to you guys.

#Sleepy - January 4, 2015, 6:38 am

I've had many problems with 1and1.com i wouldn't reccomend buying from them.

yoshi6300 - January 4, 2015, 10:16 pm

Wow that's a great deal thanks for posting!

SHRAPNEL - January 4, 2015, 10:20 pm

1&1 is nothing but a scam company. They say that it's $1 for a year, however after my one year was over, I ended up getting over $50 in charges. I was instantly reported to my credit company.

Just remove your PayPal from the account, and cancel the Recurring Payments options within PayPal.

1and1 has been having this 1$ sell for awhile now, some of my friends bought domains from them. But I personally buy all my domains through namecheap, since it's easier to manage all my domains in one location. And I plan to keep them awhile, and not drop them year after year. :P

That's true. Namecheap sure is easier to use (for many domains). However, I mostly use domains only for 1 year and then get rid of them so for me this was a great choice.

Krew - April 1, 2015, 11:44 am

Their $1 .com domain promo is still going on, guys :)

MaxiPads889 - April 1, 2015, 5:39 pm

Have bought over 20 domains from 1and1 over the years and I surprisingly haven't had an issue unlike you guys. I guess with PayPal they aren't charging directly to your card so you can just cancel it. Although I've got letters from other companies trying to get me to renew some domains with them. Very odd, but overall haven't had an issue!

Probably had a secret 'opt-in to 3rd party newsletters' in their TOS upon purchase ?

I've purchased from 1and1 in the past because I needed a quick and cheap legit domain name. Never had a problem with, other than it taking 3 days to work properly.

True that. It works excellent.

The renewal fees are a nightmare though. ?
