Thread: Scammed \$6.50 USD | PositiveEnergy | Houdini VPN | UID = 2370059

IntelliJ - January 1, 2015, 1:16 pm

Hello everyone!

Writing up this quick scam report on PositiveEnergy. He sold me, and is currently selling a broken VPN entitled "Houdini VPN". I'll have a video up displaying verification of the errors shown on this post and this post.

I asked Positive for a refund, citing the reasons in the two above links and specified I was not interested in fixing his VPN. The client is buggy as hell and poorly designed. I mean, come on his client claims my IP is 127.0.0.1. It was obvious he just wanted a quick buck in selling the product.

Here's our conversation:

Spoiler (Click to View)

Video coming soon. Currently processing.

Positive, I'm sure you're going to read this - I will be opening a PayPal dispute in no more than 5 calendar days. There are several people telling you that your product is broken. Fix your product, fix your site, and then start selling again.

Again, the amount is $6.50 USD.

Proof of purchase:

Looks legit. Sorry man. Hope you win the dispute

I sent you everything you needed. The reason you had issues is the web cache through my hosting provider. I am looking into finding a new host who will whitelist IP's for me. Basically what happened was when you download locations.rar it gives you Canada/EU those are not my servers. I got online today & saw the issue SO i resolved it by sending him a correct link to the locations. You're impatient, my VPN is not broken. I have over 30 happy clients & you will see the 15 people getting a 15 day free trial for 2015 will vouch and say that MY PRODUCT WORKS & IS QUALITY. Yeah my site isn't perfect but I can link you to a handful of other VPN Services with no ToS. You are a very dramatic user and your issue was resolved as soon as it came to my attention, you may dispute, even if you win you will always have a license with HoudiniVPN since you purchased Lifetime Subscription. Sorry we have been up for a week and not everything is golden BUT it's getting fixed as time goes. Have a good day and quit being CRAZY over $6.50 Houdini VPN is NOT a scam. It is a very trustworthy product.

waiting to see this "video" Imfao ignorant skid is ignorant

JustLinux - January 7, 2015, 2:12 am

Sure hope to see all this get resolved for you OP.

IntelliJ - January 7, 2015, 4:50 am

Video updated. With this proof, I'll now be opening a PayPal dispute.

He's requested a simple refund, you haven't provided him a service meaning you should give his money back. Obviously if you don't it just shows your poor and don't have enough money to run your service at all.

ao1092190 - January 7, 2015, 9:11 pm

LOL just googled houdini VPN and got this. I bought Houdini VPN and yeah his client is broken. If you use his OpenVPN configs, it's 100% legit and working

Have you even tried out his Openvpn configs yet, or naw?

Go ahead and try it.

Getting pissed over $6.50 when the product works and your lazy ass needs to use the client instead of OpenVPN, give me a break.

Not to mention it's a lifetime license, and on my end, it increased my ping by 2 and my download/upload remained constant.

And yes, IP Check showed different IP

I told the owner that I was not interested in fixing his product at all. He has a broken client, his site is slow, and he didn't even take the time to update the logo on the invoice. I feel as though he's incompetent to run a VPN.

joons - January 8, 2015, 5:12 am

I suggest you get this resolved, PositiveEnergy. Good luck OP.

TreeWeep - January 8, 2015, 5:20 am

Why are people even scamming for that amount, makes no sense to me.

IntelliJ - January 8, 2015, 5:23 am

This may be worth posting - I added PositiveEnergy to my ignore list. He knows what my PayPal is - if he wants to refund me he can do that. He doesn't need to communicate with me.

OP I can see this is very Legit the user that scammed you is mad at the world I guess. I sure do hope to see you get your money back though.

payed for a month to try it out got errors trying to connect , contact support via skype , never fixed my problem its only a buck but want others to know what to expect geil - February 4, 2015, 12:08 pm

I've been using HoudiniVPN since day one on my linux machine. If the client isn't working then use openVPN, works like a charm.

I can't say I've used his client but his service does exactly what I payed for and he was nice enough to answer some questions before I purchased. I came on HF today to vouch for his product.

sketchy as fuck.

I did buy his lifetime vpn a month-ish ago. I doubt that he's a "scammer". If you read his thread, he has alot of payment problems but so far it's been resolved(hopefully). I think he needs to fix that. In terms of client, it's a problem too. Sometimes it does work, sometimes it stucked and won't work. I did send him PM and didn't get a reply but I solved the problem on my own.

That's just my problems but I still think that he's legit and trustworthy.
