Got quoted 360$ for a front-end template.

Got quoted 180$ for the same thing by a licensed team.

Cannot comment on his ability but the prices do seem to be a little steep, I guess if you have the extra cash it's worth checking out.

Yes, you get what you pay for. If you want quality, then you will have to spend a higher amount.

And Not sure why you are boasting about the other people's "2 days completion" when you didnt even ask me how long it would of taken me, for all your concerned, I could of promised it for a same duration span.

In regards to the "12 devs", we are just as structured. Chances are your "12 devs" are made of up "Johnny the 12 old forum user" whereas we are a registered limited company with 10+ years experience who have employees on payroll.

Anyways, Best of lucks on your purchase.

UPDATE: Spoke to Jake on private, agreed on the misunderstanding and solved things out between us.

(Feb 25, 2015 10:59 AM)Federal Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You own a web development service but don't have your own website ?

Can you explain why you randomly say we dont have a website? I certainly did not say this. We have a website, and if you are interested you can ask us for our website in private. Just read the thread and you can see why our website is not posted publicly.

Thanks!

(Jan 22, 2015 05:45 PM)Fire First Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I hope people here don't take this the wrong way, and as much as I trust this community, it is a 'darker' place. A place where advertising your work could grasp the attention of unwanted entities (ddosers who do it for no reason, hackers and etc).

We still like to advertise our services for those people who come to our thread with legitimate purposes, but we acknowledge that there are still people who visit, that are not clean. 90% of our clients (out of the 140 websites we have developed and host) are legitimate business, such as dentist labs, garages, property sellers and etc. Revealing the websites could POTENTIALLY reveal not only our clients information to unwanted sources, but even open our servers up for ddos or even rooting.

Showing our portfolio in private is just a small attempt to weave out at least a small percentage of illegitimate people.

We have experience in the past that after leaving links to our websites, people started ddosing them, for NO REASON.

Hope you understand, and please take no offence.
