

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Vouch copy review?

Tostig - January 6, 2015, 8:23 pm

If you give someone a vouch copy and you make them to agree to give you a review and they don't give you one and instead run off with the vouch copy, is that against the rules? I gave him the vouch copy and made him agree to my terms by posting in the thread and he still hasn't delivered. If this indeed against the rules, I will post his profile.

Sasaki Haise - January 6, 2015, 8:24 pm

I don't believe so, by giving a vouch copy, it's practically giving a free sample out. Of course it's courtesy to leave a review, but eh, can't expect it towards some people I guess.

JuiceProductions - January 6, 2015, 8:24 pm

Kid's got offensive nobody reviewed their shitty ebook? Well then.

PrivateDonut - January 6, 2015, 8:25 pm

That's why you only give vouch copy's to people who have a decent amount of posts / rep. But I don't think it's against the rules really, not that I seen.

clark.dll - January 6, 2015, 8:26 pm

No this is not against the rules: however you can create a community warning in the marketplace.

Joshh - January 6, 2015, 8:26 pm

Technically it would go under a deal dispute. You made a deal. So post a thread warning others. A deal doesnt always require money and a product. Instead of accepting money you wanted a review posted in your thread.

Emylbus - January 6, 2015, 8:48 pm

It sounds like you made a deal with a guy in which you gave someone a product in exchange for a service. And it sounds like said person didn't provide said service. Seems to me like that would fall under a deal dispute.

HF does not get involved in deal disputes.

(Jan 6, 2015 09:26 PM)Joshh Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Technically it would go under a deal dispute. You made a deal. So post a thread warning others. A deal doesnt always require money and a product. Instead of accepting money you wanted a review posted in your thread.
?

Omniscient - January 6, 2015, 9:35 pm

I suggest you leave him appropriate reputation like "Requested vouch copy but did not write a review per our agreement."

You could if you feel it's appropriate also create a Deal Dispute thread.