Tips

1) Never store passwords in / on your browser.

Keep them written down or in your head. Not on your browser.

2) Always Opt out of tracking (Although this is obviously not going to just take every tracker away)

3) Make sure your default browser settings are updated / to your liking.

[Will add more as I feel necessary]

Nice list NoScript, hope it helps someone.

FRANKIE - January 19, 2015, 6:30 pm

Always here to help. I am sure someone can use this to benefit themselves.

LabWorks - January 19, 2015, 8:22 pm

It's a good list, but you forgot PrivateInternetAccess, they might be the new kids on the block but only $40 a year for a vpn, the servers are fast too, idk, I just think they deserve a little credit. I have been using for the past 3 weeks, been good so far. Another good Google Chrome extension could be browsec proxy, its VERY noob proof, and I don't use Internet Explorer, but IE is vulnerable to SSL Strip, so you might want to put a few things for that (for those to arrogant to switch). Keep up the good stuff man!

Exactly it just makes me mad because it is supposed to be the default program for every windows computer but winds up having the most vulnerabilities and everything else.

They are not the new kids on the block lol

But guys, do NOT enable "Block reported attack sites" and "Block reported web forgeries"

This will send information to Google

FRANKIE - January 26, 2015, 4:20 pm

Thanks for the feedback. Hopefully other users can get something out of this as well.

Frankie,

I noticed how you're title is blackhat in training. I would like to "train" with you or get some advice on where to start. I mean, I know what dark comet is and getting a slave and all of that , which is very basic. But.... could you forward me to a thread or website where you learned the most about your blackhat likings?

Thanks so much,

-jdejean

I can not and I will not. I'd like to think of myself as more of a magician. Can't be giving out any secrets.

www.google.com <- Ask it the same question you just asked me. Start from there.

There's a typo in your title, I believe it should say "resources", not "recources"..?

You should probably mention that free VPNs are shitty.

Nonetheless, nice thread.

Interesting guide ! nice work bro :))

FRANKIE - February 11, 2015, 4:24 pm
Thank you tqmedia, it took a while to put together.

logging*machine - February 12, 2015, 7:41 pm
Nice tutorial.
But just keep all your dirty work vpn -> To
It's your best bet imo.

FRANKIE - February 13, 2015, 11:05 pm
I see, well this was less of a tutorial thread and more of a collective resources thread.
Thanks for the input though!

Chronos46and2 - February 14, 2015, 8:27 pm
Very helpful information. I appreciate that.

tko - February 15, 2015, 7:47 am
Great info very helpful.

Another good vpn is overplay

FRANKIE - February 15, 2015, 8:36 am

Thank you all for the kind feedback, I really appreciate it.

Chronos46and2 - February 15, 2015, 4:29 pm

I tried out Kopard's Premium trial. Super fast and slick. If I had the $-I might go with them, but I don't so that's out.

FRANKIE - February 15, 2015, 7:42 pm

Yeah they are honestly the fastest I have seen.

Legion. - February 15, 2015, 10:35 pm

Great tutorial! I will certainly put the extensions into use. Thanks!

FRANKIE - February 18, 2015, 12:34 pm

Thank you Legion. I appreciate the kind words :-)

Ayyomark123 - March 21, 2015, 12:30 am

Posting this so I can see it later on , thanks a very good list

FRANKIE - March 21, 2015, 12:34 am

Thank you very much. Let me know if you think I should add anything!

Thank you! If you think anything should be added let me know!

VirtualMon3y - April 26, 2015, 7:33 am

I use a paid Vpn PIA but you cant port forward and keep the same port open all the time. They change it every few weeks for security reasons... which can be annoying

Do you recommend any of the free VPN's in your TUT or just moving to another paid vpn. If so which ones dont keep logs and are good for port forwarding?

nepHaXOr - May 19, 2015, 8:11 am

:o Thanks alot man.... you are such a great

FRANKIE - May 25, 2015, 3:48 pm

Hopefully this list is not outdated. Thank you all for the positive feedback

Cubebrush - May 27, 2015, 2:10 pm

Nice guide! Got some new extensions to add, now I need to get all my passwords off of Chrome :v

FRANKIE - May 27, 2015, 2:39 pm

Hopefully none of these are outdated, I made this a while ago so let me know if anything isn't working

b?xxy - June 11, 2015, 7:54 pm

Really nice list you have there, will bookmark.

Zayzo - June 11, 2015, 8:03 pm

A better tip would be also to not use Firefox or chrome. Both vulnerable to webRTC leaks/exploits.

Use opera or some other browser.

FRANKIE - June 11, 2015, 8:09 pm

Opera I know is vulnerable. Just depends on how you use what you got

Zayzo - June 11, 2015, 8:12 pm

(Jun 11, 2015 08:09 PM)FRANKIE Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Opera I know is vulnerable. Just depends on how you use what you got I don't think opera is vulnerable to WEBRTC leak actually. Webrtc leak is the leaking of a users real ip even behind a VPN.

Many new exploiters are using xss framework on people who use chrome and Firefox.

I tell all clients to stay away from those two browsers.

Interesting, well it has been a while since I updated things. I will keep this in mind when setting up again.

Ginsum - June 11, 2015, 8:21 pm

Best tip to give someone

Don't use chrome to do anything illegal lol

Zayzo - June 11, 2015, 8:39 pm

Definitely a good guide Frankie. For those persistent Firefox users. If you use Firefox, your ip can easily be exploited!

FRANKIE - June 12, 2015, 4:08 am

Thanks anyways lol, now I feel like open book. Need to get my shit setup

Wouldn't disabling WEBRTC prevent it ?
