

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Cleaning Laptop LCD

He B TeMy - January 20, 2015, 7:38 am

What do you guys use/recommend to clean a laptop's LCD screen?

I've been searching online and they recommend a custom-sold solution specialized for screens and some home-made one's using vinagre and destiled water...

Anyway, i got a cloth from my previous glasses that's perfect for cleaning screens, but what i used in the past was some spray-cleaning glasses product to clean the screen, but it run out and nobody in my house uses glasses anymore.

I do use lens however, with a product named Hy-Care, can i use that to clean my screen too?

I don't wanna screw things up, this is the only computer i got lol.

It's a 15.6" anti-reflexive matte* FHD screen if that matters.

Thanks.

obviouslyracist - January 20, 2015, 8:03 am

Water and microfiber cloth is all you need.

If you really want to get rid of everything, then use microfiber with alcohol 100% alcohol(isopropylique).

Do not use windex or whatever or any of those things for glasses.

Do it in a circular motion and magic happens

He B TeMy - January 20, 2015, 8:05 am

(Jan 20, 2015 09:03 AM)obviouslyracist Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Water and microfiber cloth is all you need.

If you really want to get rid of everything, then use microfiber with alcohol 100% alcohol(isopropylique).

Do not use windex or whatever or any of those things for glasses.

Do it in a circular motion and magic happens

Are you sure that doesn't harm my screen?

Everywhere i read online it says NO alcohol literally... distilled water i have, cloth i have too, but i want to get rid of everything as you say, but i don't think water'll do..

Edit: Some recommend isopropyl alcohol and vinegar, so, i believe there's different types of alcohol... (lol)

obviouslyracist - January 20, 2015, 8:17 am

(Jan 20, 2015 09:05 AM)He B TeMy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Are you sure that doesn't harm my screen?

Everywhere i read online it says NO alcohol literally... distilled water i have, cloth i have too, but i want to get rid of everything as you say, but i don't think water'll do..

Edit: Some recommend isopropyl alcohol and vinegar, so, i believe there's different types of alcohol... (lol)

That's why I said isopropyl alcohol. It will not harm your screen.

And use a microfiber cloth for obvious reasons.

I have NEVER heard of using vinegar to clean the screen.

He B TeMy - January 20, 2015, 8:19 am well, i can't vouch for this site but:

<http://www.wikihow.com/Clean-a-Computer-Monitor/LCD-Screen>

On 2.

Anyway, i'd do a safe bet with distilled water only, if it doesn't clear like i want, then i'll try isopropyl i guess.

Thanks.