I am PM'ing you some questions about your service now

Orchid - January 25, 2015, 4:31 pm

Last time something like this went up a user's computer got fucked, I would close this thread if I were you.

SIM-2223238 - February 23, 2015, 7:00 am

I am opening this thread again, If you need help, PM me your skype or teamviewer details.

Do you mind asking the person you are helping if they don't mind having their logs public?

It would be awesome if there was resources to look at. Hell you can probably tell us what you did if there was a particular hard problem so that people like me(who are learning white hat) can study from. You know just additional resources to look at.

Thanks.

I would like to know how you would remove a replicating piece of malware hidden in your system files.

Just to insure you know what you're doing.

Orchid, I am not that great yet,

I got this on my own pc once, and just found the shit in the register,

But some viruses are just too annoying, that you even have to reset your pc to a factory settings,

But the most people have these basic viruses.

You providing help and other various things is fine, but I do not recommend you going into others system via Teamviewer.

Why actually, It wont cause any problems actually,

I will be more secure, with the regedit only.

You should not touch anyone's regedit period. I would not even do this and I am quite confident with regedit. The reason why is that if you mess up even once then the person's computer could be gone.

I am going to leave a neutral on you so people are warned, this is temporary.

HitSweMan - February 23, 2015, 10:04 am

Could you also check if you have virus or a RAT? I mean if you think you are infected?

Is this awesome service only for removing bad programs or help deleting some other shit o something that you need help with?

Well, Orchid.

Its not like, I am gonna delete random shit from regedit/something else, I am always secure with what I am doing,

I already helped alot people trough teamviewer, Whats wrong,

I wont install any virus or something?

Well, There are some threads here, that shows you how to find out, that you are infected.

Google ESET scanner, and run a scan.

If you change values or you delete something wrong; just close this thread.

SIM-2223238 - February 23, 2015, 11:01 am

No, I wont change values, nor I will delete something wrong,
Ive did ths numerous times, and never failed.

Orchid, quit trying to act like a back-seat admin.

It makes you look even stupider than your haircut.

And what made you think, that I would jack someone their computers?

HitSweMan - February 23, 2015, 11:36 am

Orchid can you just STFU? Please? Don't act like you are a back-seat admin. Just makes you look more stupied.

If you accidentally delete the wring thing, god you're not thinking.

SIM-2223238 - February 23, 2015, 12:20 pm

So you are saying, I always make mistakes?

And intend to jack someone their computers?

I am not like that, Why are you judging me, without actually knowing me?

HoshHash - February 23, 2015, 12:37 pm

He is/was infected with adwares and you say like this "Well, instead of getting these hard things done, You can just lookup a adblocker, and block all those ads."

Not sure but it would be great if you removed those adwares instead of using Adblock that will mostly fail at blocking adwares.

-Farfar.

Also is my simple instructions so hard to follow if i may ask?

-Farfar.Example A: Aggron thinks AdBlock blocks adware.

And that means instantly, I cant be trusted and infect other people?

Come back with better reasons, with actual malware.

:D :D :D :D :D Adblock is the king of blocking adwares! Didnt you know that? :OOO haha

USE THIS SERVICE AT OWN RISK!

Nice service tho!

You're illiterate as fuck, I mean, if you're in my pc and there is a file hidden in my files named csrss.exe and you delete the real one, what happens?

You do realize he ignored several of your questions already so be prepared for him to google the solution.

Well on my pc, you are actually not able to delete the "real" csrss.exe, btw, You can see where the task is located from.
