

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: 40 GBP Windows 8.1 tablet

'Snorlax - January 26, 2015, 1:32 am

I know these specs aren't incredible or anything, but the reviews are pretty damn good on these three tablets.

You can save £30 when buying a new tablet, if you send in your old tablet. I'm not sure which tablets you can send in, but you can read more here

7 inch tablet

8 inch tablet

10 inch tablet - Not a great deal.

This means you can get a fully working Windows 8.1 tablet with 1GB RAM and an Intel Atom "quad core" CPU, for just about £40 or $60.

If you don't have an old tablet, this is still a pretty cheap tablet. £70 for a tablet with Windows 8.1... damn. And it's x86 not RT.

Creative Cloud - January 26, 2015, 2:15 am

Bought the 8 inch version for my girlfriend over the christmas and they're a great little tablet. 7 inches would be too small for running the full windows 8.1 os but 8 inches is just fine. The 1GB ram performs surprisingly well in it.

It also comes with a year of office 365 so it's worth the price just for that - a great investment for a student ^.^

'Snorlax - January 26, 2015, 2:28 am

(Jan 26, 2015 03:15 AM)Millertary Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Bought the 8 inch version for my girlfriend over the christmas and they're a great little tablet. 7 inches would be too small for running the full windows 8.1 os but 8 inches is just fine. The 1GB ram performs surprisingly well in it.

It also comes with a year of office 365 so it's worth the price just for that - a great investment for a student ^.^

Ah nice to hear that! How does she like the actual tablet? Does it run smoothy or does it stutter a lot? Also, what's the boot up time like?

Coffee™ - January 26, 2015, 2:39 am nice, i have bought a similar one, just from hp with same specs and cheaper. 100$ in usa, and around 160$ in denmark

that tablet are cheap and it is called hp stream 7

it was pretty much close to get sold out in denmark when i bought it. :O

'Snorlax - January 26, 2015, 4:22 am

(Jan 26, 2015 03:39 AM)Coffee™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) nice, i have bought a similar one, just from hp with same specs and cheaper. 100$ in usa, and around 160$ in denmark

that tablet are cheap and it is called hp stream 7

it was pretty much close to get sold out in denmark when i bought it. :O

Ah yeah I looked that one up too, but this is cheaper. Did you buy it from ProShop?

Creative Cloud - January 26, 2015, 4:33 am

(Jan 26, 2015 03:28 AM)Snorlax Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Ah nice to hear that! How does she like the actual tablet? Does it run smoothy or does it stutter a lot? Also, what's the boot up time like?

The tablet runs smoothly for her use, just general browsing, facebook and skype, although the camera quality is pretty dismal (but still usable).

The boot up time is around 10 seconds or so.