

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: Legal terms?

Sogomn - January 26, 2015, 9:03 am

Hey. Is anyone familiar with the legal terms of RATs? As long as nobody takes damage, is it a crime to deploy software on a PC? And doesn't the victim "agree" with the program at the point of execution?

GoodFriend777 - January 26, 2015, 11:27 am

Hey

I don't know but many governments use the RATs.

If you use or create RATs but you use just in education this is not a problem.

The problem begins when you send the RAT to a bank :)

Batcard - January 26, 2015, 11:28 am

If the person that is being RATted is unaware of it, you are committing a crime.

?

Talon - January 26, 2015, 11:32 am

RAT's aka Remote Administration Tools are used to remotely control other computers (Very self-explainable).

There are many legal ways that RAT's are used that are beneficial. Team Viewer is a Remote Administration Tool, but the things you can do on it are limited compared to what you could do with a Dark Comet RAT.

Using a RAT on someone else without their permission and they're unaware that you have RATTED them, that would be defined as illegal, and then you could get in trouble for it.

As long as you're safe, and not retarded X 10, you shouldn't really have to worry TOO much about getting in trouble.

Sogomn - January 26, 2015, 11:34 am

Well. I am kind of retarded. I do not get VPN and DNS working simultaneously...

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4655609>