The upcoming update for NanoCore should make it's remote desktop speeds exceed that of IM3, you also failed to mention that IM3 requires an extremely high amount of bandwidth and consumes about twice as much CPU on both client and server end while using remote desktop. As for NanoCore having very few options, I would strongly disagree.. IM3 can't even upload files in it's file manager. :[

I can't tell if you're being sarcastic or not.. Just in case you're not I would like to point out that NanoCore is consistently praised for having great support while IM3 is consistently rated very poorly when it comes to support; and they have a team of roughly 3 people while I'm doing everything solo. Also, NanoCore on average has 40% more users online than IM so take from that what you will.. :[

Still waiting for you to update your thread about that con on NanoCore "Very Low FPS (Will Go Up In The Upcoming Update!)", it's simply not true anymore. Most people will tell you that NanoCore's remote desktop is faster than IM now. You may also want to list bad support under IM since that is the most common complaint I see about it.

Vuln - March 11, 2015, 8:03 am

I just can't believe that CyberSeal would be the best crypter. How exactly are you affiliated with CyberSeal or its coder?

fixed low fps but IM3 still has the fastest fps even with my 3mb internet! and nano core desktop viewing on that fast fps mode is very visable

6e756c6c - March 11, 2015, 3:14 pm

I don't understand how "normal FPS" is a con. Also, the way IM calculates FPS is inaccurate and it's actually much lower than what is being displayed; NanoCore -is- faster.

Cryptex has a LOT more customers, which is one of the reasons why it might have a shorter FUD time. Besides, there are a multiple other things that matter just as much. And I'm not saying that to promote Cryptex, I don't even own it.

It's just that I remember Cyber Coder (aka SaddamC&P) for selling the worst crypter ever on HF, although I do have to admit that that was quite some time ago.

I really hope that he's capable of coding a half decent crypter now, but I'm having a hard time believing it. How big are his stubs these days? And does he still tell his customers to obfuscate their

I just bought and tested LegacyLink. I found that Darkcomet actually had less bugs than it (not kidding!). The desktop speeds are pretty good, but you can't even see the desktop if you want to enable keyboard and mouse control with it. There are also many password issues that I've had. The flags and locations for my clients never even appeared!

You should examine the program more to take a look at these bugs and add them to the cons list.

You guys can find the IM3 thread here! I know some people are looking for it

Ainan007 - March 30, 2015, 9:24 am

Syriam... You know what I find funny...

It's that as soon as something bad happens to NanoCore for example the removal of a certain feature you are quick to modify your thread and add it in the "cons"

But when something good happens to NanoCore for example getting better FPS (Better than IM...) you don't update your thread...

You whisper NanoCore's accomplishments and scream out it's flaws..

This thread is biased... These are not honest reviews of these RATs

How could you mix this those 2 things up so easily? I am starting to have 2nd thoughts if your "RAT and crypter" review is even legit. You could of made some mistakes their like distinguishing the difference between FUD and NOT FUD. Oh I already see the mistake you made.

That's another issue entirely, and I find that 98% (seriously) of issues are due to user error. Either because they insist on using an anti-virus, firewall, re-using ports, etc. The update before last put a lot of warnings and checks in place to help prevent user error and support tickets dropped by about 80%.

That's not to say NanoCore doesn't have it's issues though, the difference is I can and do fix the bugs while other developers just leave them in or use really hacky workarounds to try and hide them

(trapping EVERYTHING in Try/Catch blocks for example).

I also have to deal with bad 3rd party plugins causing client instability. Apparently I need to isolate them better! :P

As for NanoCore having very few options, I would strongly disagree.. IM3 can't even upload files in it's file manager. :[

Since new update, my nanocore will run up to 4 gb of memory, idk what you are talking about by my im3 takes shit compared to that.

I must agree with this, Have been locked out of IM3 for some time now, and still no support. Personally having problems with prototype now where clients want show up after closing prototype. Support is shit for proto also. Only get's online through skype which is only support for maybe an hour then gone for another day. and wasn't helpful at all.

You should also add support to each RAT also, whether they are good or not. IM3 and Proto shit support, AEON lives online.

Just bought nVPN because of it having Reverse Proxy. Really hope everything works.

Superpaddle90 - April 4, 2015, 7:04 pm

IM3 Is the worse rat to use at this very moment. There is No support what so ever. So everyone has license locked problems and he reads everyones requests and ignores it. NanoCore seems good, But I'm looking for something that I can do some naughty things with. Such as Password recovery and keylog. No point in posting NanoCore in the RAT program section if it's not to be considered as a rat. I don't recommended neither IM3 or NanoCore because of those reasons.

You missed out a hell lot of RATs, you should team up with many people who either have licenses to these RATs.

LuminosityLink, ProtonRAT, etc.

Also, Net Control was revamped into v2 and 3 out of the 4 cons have been dealt with. I was always pursuing quality. Also, the project was sold and will arrive soon.

Quote:Desktop viewer and Cam viewer have a low FPS

Use these settings.
