Thread: Omnicoins Back Online

Abraham Lincoln - February 16, 2015, 9:06 pm

The OmniCoin dev team is glad to announce that Omnicoin is now back online. The pools, exchanges, payment processors, etc should be coming back online shortly. It is also safe to now make transactions with OMC.

What Happened

An attacker, who's identity is unknown, performed what is known as a 51% double spend attack. This attack allows them to send Omnicoin to another party, and then later reverse the transaction by essentially rewriting the blockchain. This is not a fault in Omnicoin itself, it is a fault in all POW cryptocurrencies (including BitCoin).

The attacker sent approximately 1.2 million OMC to AllCrypt.com over the course of 6 transactions. After the deposits had reached 6 confirmations, he reversed the transactions on the blockchain, essentially giving himself back the OMC, while still keeping his account balance on AllCrypt. Then he proceeded to sell approximately 200,000 OMC, totally around 2 BTC, which he withdrew.

What We Did

We decided that this type of attack would be too hard to of a hit for Omnicoin and it would be worth it to do a rollback. Instead of a typical hard forking rollback requiring a client update, we used the exact same method the attacker used to rewrite the blockchain. We rewrote the blockchain starting 1 block before the attacker first showed his face, essentially removing and trace of the attack and taking all the OMC back.

What This Means

Just like the attackers attack had side effects (stolen OMC), our rollback will have side effects of its own. All transaction that were made after block 146197 (15-02-09 22:05:05 CST) will be invalidated. Some transactions will resend themselves in new blocks, but some wont.

Good to see this fixed?

I don't know much about crypto currencies, but can the attacker just regain 51% again? I mean if he had the resources to do it once can't he do it again?

Yes, he could perform the attack again. We are working to make this attack harder for him to complete, though.

And this time we are prepared.

We're going to start running checks on the network that will alert us instantly to any attack like this.

We've also grown in knowledge about this type of attack and how to quickly fix it. We've got all the software already setup now, ready for a future attack.

Think of this like a drill, it simply tests are ability to cope with this attack. Although it wasn't a planned drill, it helped us become more prepared.

Yup, this was actually quite beneficial to us. As stated, Omnicoin is safe to use once again, and if this happens again we are prepared. Hopefully things should resume as normal, including trade, mining and the auction. Big things are happening!

VRUMM - February 16, 2015, 9:31 pm

I think just to be safe, people should do max $50 per exchange from now on. Bter was hacked this week. These sites are not the safest.

Also everyone should stop exchanging OMC on HF, since there are two guys who just got scammed in total of 5 BTC ($1100) worth of OMC today by Nickelodeon. This got to be the worst month for OMC.

FRANKIE - February 16, 2015, 9:32 pm

Awesome I can now get back to mining! Does this mean the awards / Ep1c upgrades will be available?

Abraham Lincoln - February 16, 2015, 9:35 pm

Well thanks to someone who decided to mine OMC by himself while we were working, the OMC got sent back to the attacker again.

We'll get this cleaned up ASAP.

Consider OMC back offline for now.

Is that possible to banned OMC Address that steal 2 BTC from AllCrypt? Banned it and make it impossible to sell his OMC or maybe we can move all his OMC to developers team wallets.

Where those payouts from the pool or something?

All the transactions during the rollback period were rolled back. Some will be confirmed again, but some wont. It looks like the ones in your wallet didn't reconfirm. Most likely because they came from mining orphan blocks.

From the 5 missing transaction there's 4 payout from mining (~100 OMC each) and one withdraw from allcrypt (~1360) but I'm sure all of them happend before the 51% attack of Allcrypt.

Every date I have provided are GMT +1

15-02-10 08:39 GMT + 1 was the first recorded transaction you showed.

Didn't you say he got btc from it from selling and withdrew? So the OMC is back where it originally came from but he still made profit ?

All that work for just 2 BTC? If you know how to do all that shit why not make your time more valuable.. I mean, don't get me wrong. That's decent money but clearly he knew what he was doing. ?

It was probably an attack against Omnicoin from someone who either just wanted some lulz or wanted to take down Omnicoin due to a grudge.

If he just wanted money, you are correct, Omnicoin isn't the greatest coin to attack just for money.
