Thread: Group Blacklist

Realizm - February 13, 2015, 11:17 am

This has been suggested before, and only somewhat denied 4 years ago, and again 3 years ago.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=1780408&pid=22494849#pid22494849>

It has been 3 years and I don't see MyBB making a blacklist feature. This plugin would be somewhat identical to how the ignore feature works, but only for groups. You add somebody to the blacklist, and they will no longer be able to apply via usercp. Whether this is added to the actual usergroup cp as an extra choice besides Accept, Ignore, or Decline is up to Omni of course. This could also just be placed on the users profile down by the Ignore/Buddy list buttons.

Those are just my suggested areas of placing this option. The main point of this is to get the actual feature implemented ?

adampelletgun - February 13, 2015, 11:18 am

Would be a useful tool for group owners.

Eternal. - February 13, 2015, 11:19 am

This would be great for getting rid of spammers who constantly apply.

Jay Rock - February 13, 2015, 11:21 am

I support this not that my support really matters

DLT. - February 13, 2015, 11:27 am

I also fully support this idea and agree it would be beneficial for group owners.

Nate - February 13, 2015, 11:34 am

I think omni denied it because the way mybb works with groups and it would be very challenging to implent something like this.

Roger Waters - February 13, 2015, 11:44 am

As a group leader I support this completely. A few tools such as this would be extremely helpful.

tweety - February 13, 2015, 11:46 am

Really need this, tired of waking up to stupid amount of applications from trolls.

Lord.Baltimore - February 13, 2015, 11:47 am

And yeah, good idea for the group blacklist.

I did not realize that this would be a troublesome feature to add. Nonetheless, it would very much be appreciated and most likely used by every group leader/owner.

Yes, this would be a wonderful feature. Most other features that leaders/owners would want can be achieved through userscripts such as mass alerts, deny all, etc.

Hazy - February 13, 2015, 12:19 pm

I can somewhat understand why this would be useful for group owners.

The amount of trolls and probably new members who don't know what groups are, who then apply via the UserCP could easily be stopped if it happened to be implemented.

If only adding it wasn't so complex.

Yeah, it's stupid how many people apply and try to trick you into accepting them. I've had so many PM's and join requests with reasons like, "Hey, I took a vacation ban recently and it kicked me from the group. Can you add me back?" or reasons like, "Hey somebody removed me, add me back please." when they were never even in the group. ???

Then when you tell them they're denied acceptance or whatever they spam the join request and get their friends to make join requests. It's annoying.

DashPHP - February 13, 2015, 12:24 pm

You really should have more control of your group if you're going to be paying 5k+.

Vouch, hope it gets added!

If groups had the option to disable the apply through UserCP option that would be a great addition also. 99% of all members who apply to groups only through that way aren't added to the group anyways.

If this is easier, than possibly this feature. But Titans will be holding events which will require mass adding of members. We had 153 participants for the last event, and adding everybody by typing their username would be horrible. But if I turn on the UserCP Join Request, than anybody can apply and simply changing your username would be enough to get into the group. Even if you are on our private blacklist. We just don't have the time to check the blacklist and click on every single member that joins to make sure they aren't blacklisted.

I feel like having a blacklist feature would solve all of this and more for every group.

The way MyBB works with groups really shouldn't matter I'd say. It's basically like adding a member to your Ignore list. Because that already exists, it should be a little easier to implement this. I agree with this completely; you won't believe how many times Roger Waters sends a join request to Titans..

You've worked with MyBB before... so I want to believe you lol xD

I want to see what Omniscent has to say about this. To see if it would be fairly easy or if it would be difficult. Idk anything about coding but if somebody goes to click Join Request on a group it'll just check for their UID on a blacklist.txt or something and then if it's false they can go ahead and if it's true than they'd just be sent to a page that says they don't have permission like when you click on a thread that has already been junked or moved to a private forum.

brian188246 - February 13, 2015, 3:24 pm

This would only effect the few people who are group owners on HF.

I think an easier solution would be to just have the ability to disable joining groups via UserCP if something like this would be hard to implement.

Sir - February 13, 2015, 4:45 pm

I can see this being a useful tool but I would say that it should only be available to the group owner and not the other leaders.

Based God Tyrone - February 13, 2015, 5:10 pm

What happens if the group changes hands? Would there be a feature to mass un-blacklist people?

Just remove the apply through user cp.
No one uses it as groups have recruitment threads.

Titans personally gets around 5+ join requests almost everyday. And if the group changes hands then the new owner can remove all the blacklists like he can the members.

Within MyBB, if you disable the ability to apply via User CP then users aren't able to leave the group either. IMO it's stupid how it comes in a package deal. That means more work for the leader if someone wants to leave.

For example, I'm in writers. You can't join it via User CP, nor can I leave it. Sir or another leader has to add or remove anyone.

Surely you could just remove the join buttons with css or by deleting them?

No because I'm left with a notification that is similar to a PM notification and it gets annoying to have it there all of the time. I can use a userscript to hide it, but it's still not the same. And not everybody that is blacklisted applies through the usercp.

The issue is letting group owners have the control on this. Would be a pain in the ass to implement. I would like this type of feature though. I'll have to consider it more carefully but I think there are more pressing things to do.

It would almost be better to have an invite system for groups with an invite code maybe.

It would almost be better to have an invite system for groups with an invite code maybe. An invite system could work so long as members could no longer make a Join Request and the invite code could be listed publicly and used by multiple members. Once the group no longer wants members to join at will they could generate a new code, making the publicly posted one useless.

I agree that there are other things that need attention, but I would like to see the idea for this be worked on and added to the To-Do list.

(Apr 9, 2015 12:30 AM)Joclings Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) An invite code might cause problems though. For instance, if someone got ahold of it, they were able to join a group. So it would have to be attached to the profile.

If the Owner/Leader could generate the code and it'd be like 26 random letters and numbers then it'd be a lot less likely of people figuring it out.

Or if members could only make a Join Request by having the code. So the code could be posted publicly and then the leaders could approve and disapprove who could join the group. Once they no longer want join requests they can either have a disable button to disable the code or regenerate a new code.

There are a lot of people applying tonight to the group I lead (and others I presume), it would be nice to black list them since it's the same people re-applying each time. Why not have the apply via UserCP thing disabled and just have it so they have to be added by a leader? I don't know of many leaders who actually use the UserCP as a way of actually adding members to the group.

I also had at least 6 or 7 join requests last night that I took care of personally and the other leaders of Titans denied a few as well. But simply disabling the Join Request feature isn't something I am looking for because when Titans hosts evens, or Fortune opens their doors to the public, we use the Join Request feature. It would also mean that members couldn't leave a group on their own if the Join Request feature was disabled.

An invite code of some sorts or a blacklist would solve all of the issues, problems, whatever you call them lol.

Yes just message Omni and he will take whatever action he feels necessary. Some people get banned for excessively spamming the Join Group CP.

Joshz - June 5, 2015, 7:51 am

I've owned groups on other relatively large boards and I was getting 20+ join requests every day. It isn't even the requests that annoyed me because I'd be content to leave them sitting there, but that red bar at the top of my screen annoyed the hell out of me. And it was the same retards that did it repetitively for the most part.

Counter suggestion: remove the alert saying you have pending join requests at the top of your screen and instead make it so leaders have to manually go to /showgroups.php or whatever the page is and view them there. That will work for titan events and groups that add all members who apply (fortune/pirates).

That will work for titan events and groups that add all members who apply (fortune/pirates).

I have a userscript to that hides these, but either way I don't mind them building up when I'm on my phone, which is 90% of the time I'm on HF like right now lol. With the group blacklist, members that the group/leaders want nothing to do with can make it so they cannot apply at all. This would help with Titans events instead of having to keep track when 100+ all apply via usercp.

(Jun 5, 2015 08:27 AM)Vinnie Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I never add anyone in via the cp unless I give them a password or if I tell them to apply and accept them within that minute.

Yeah we don't usually accept people via usercp, but for the events we host and whatnot this would be helpful. Also, groups could have their own blacklist and if Omni implemented this he might go so far as to make it so when a leader tries to add them it gives an error saying they're on the blacklist and cannot be added. I'm sure it would be helpful for groups with lots of leaders and get a lot of miscommunication.

Yeah, this would definitely be an amazing addition, I can see how this would get annoying.

Because notifications would still show from them.

That's the whole reason for them to be blacklisted xD

Lol you misunderstand, I mean like leaders couldn't manually enter their name and add them without removing them from the blacklist lol. I know Omni is working on a log for groups so he could add the blacklist right into the log as well so we would know if a member was added/removed from the blacklist.

Since this thread was ed I've had 4 people message me saying they took a vacation ban and want to be added back to Titans ?

And since this was ed I've denied 6+ join requests and iHydra has denied a few as well lol.

I'm aware I need to add better tools for group owners. Thanks for the suggestion.
