Thread: Everyone:: ItsFluffy's Pawfect Trainer Dog Training Free Service

ItsFluffy - February 17, 2015, 4:02 pm

Many members know I'm actually a legitimate, professional, certified dog trainer and many don't.

I'm offering this service for multiple reasons:

- To prove training over live: e.g. Skype, is possible
- To build testimonials for my website and a site that hosts my business concepts
- To possibly open a premium service here on hf if users believe they'd pay for it
- To show more people around the nation (maybe world) I truly am the best
- To continue to gain personal experience as every new individual dog is a learning experience
- To prove no matter the concern, there's absolutely no issue or concern I can't handle between dog and owner

So, what can I help you with? You name it.

- +Do you have a fear of dogs?
- +Does your dog bark too much?
- +Is your dog aggressive?
- +Just get a puppy and need some help?
- +Want to get a puppy and need to know how to prepare?
- +Want to know the best food for your dog?
- +Want to know what NOT to feed your dog?
- +Do you really believe you can't teach an old dog new tricks?
- +Are you having a hard time helping your newly blind/def dog?
- +Trying to convince your mom/dad/family to get a puppy?
- +Does your dog pull on the leash?
- +Is your dog insecure? Anxious? Nervous?
- +What is the best food for my specific dog?
- +Should I use an E-Collar? A choke chain? A pinch collar?

-The list is virtually endless and I'll add more as users present their questions/cases to me.

So, what should you do to take part in this? Fill out the form as best as you can and I WILL MESSAGE YOU. Those who pm me will be completely ignored. Listen, I am insanely busy as it is with pms, emails, training sessions, and everything else I do, so when I get to you, you should reply because that means I'm making time for you.

Code -How old are you (pertinent so I know my audience):

-What experiences do you have with dogs in general (previous dog owner, new dog owner, puppies, family, what?):

-What kind of dog/puppy do you have/are you getting:

-Age and sex of dog/puppy:

-Describe your question or concern in as much detail as you can:

+PLEASE HAVE A CAMERA YOU CAN USE WITH SKYPE AND A MIC!!! WITHOUT BOTH OF THESE THINGS I CANNOT HELP YOU, THIS IS LIVE TRAINING. I will ask that participants leave their review for me and I will ask permission to use their testimonial on my business if applicable.

Nonetheless don't you think it would be a bit weird for the person holding a webcam up to their dog while your saying "here puppy NO BARK!"

Lol, jokes but good luck with sales.

Thanks for the comment, but to answer in a serious note, I actually teach and train the owner over live. The dog wouldn't recognize the digital translation of a voice to their ear. Some dogs like to watch tv or hear the radio if the audio is on a certain frequency but otherwise not all dogs (most) will be able to hear an owner or other individual through a speaker due to the audio frequency altering our state of voice.

To prove to them you really do want one and won't get bored or cleaning up after the puppy after 2 weeks:

- Spend a little bit of time at a local shelter helping them
- Spend a little time at a local puppy store that responsibly sells puppies and learn some things there
- Do the proper research on what kind of puppy you'd like so you know you're not getting a breed too energetic for your life since you're probably still in school
- Proving your personal understanding of the task ahead instead of whining and complaining will greatly increase the likelihood your parents will have confidence in you to handle a puppy
- You can also bring your mom to dog parks on the weekends and talk to other owners

This is one of the most common things I teach and is VERY easy to resolve, VERY easy. Also, with labs, ALWAYS use the harnesses. You will have much more control and it will be far more comfortable for them. The essential goal will simply be to take away his need to feel dominant and defensive and it can be solved in a matter of a day or so depending on your persistence which I don't think will be an issue since you have had dogs for so long (Labs are probably my favorite breed and they will learn ANYTHING within minutes)

- Describe your question or concern in as much detail as you can:My dog used to run after other dogs and bark at then and get very aggressive but since she was attacked by two German shepherds, she is very scared of big dogs, so scared that if they come close to her, she will scream and try to run home, but she is find with smaller dogs however she does still act like before the attack with small dogs.

Ah yes, believe it or not I enjoy dealing with these cases because it's when you truly get to see just how smart and adaptive dogs truly are.

Jack russels are super trainable but you need A LOT OF PATIENCE!

They are in my opinion the most active dogs I've ever trained.

They can run for hours, play fetch, etc, and after 4 hours of non stop running you can come inside and they'll still act like they never went out.

The fear of other dogs if she was attacked is completely reasonable but we need to break her mindset of believing all dogs (bigger than her) are going to hurt her and this is 100% up to you to correct.

Dogs unlike us can get past fear VERY quickly if they have the right associations shown to them. We need to make sure they're calm and relaxed and ready to greet another dog so they don't become over anxious and go into panic mode. This I can absolutely teach you Honestly?

Yeah. As long as you use the same word or sound every single time you intend to teach the command, the dog will learn that and respond accordingly

So to clarify, you do not want her listening to others? You sure that's what you want... it's truthfully not advised. If however you mean to say that you want her making you the priority and listen on command, this can absolutely be done and will prove to be considerably easy with her being purebred german shepherd. And she is still a pup correct (under 3 years), double checking?

Chrominous™ - February 19, 2015, 2:40 pm

I guess I may have over-thought what I was wanting. And being 17 I was quick to answer and not think long term since I'd be gone with school etc and would have someone else looking after her (did not think about that part).

But now really thinking about it, I want her to be protective over me. She'll growl and hide behind me when friends come but I kind of want her to be aggressive and ready to jump if that's what I wish her to do. But not be anti-social since I still have friends come over.

Also, are there simple, easy commands for her to learn to get some bonding time? Like I said, with school/practice/work I don't have much time with her so quality>quantity wins this battle.

I was an presidential scholar and all-state olympic athlete coming out of high school so believe me i know all about having a lot of time being taken up by academics and sports and yes I absolutely still can provide you the right info to help.

The part about her "hiding behind you" will be an easy fix but will need to hear and see exactly how it happens to properly give you the exact info but should be very easily to correct as you want it to be.

For the bonding commands, yes absolutely, however please keep in mind ANY kind of training and interaction you do with her strengthens the bond between you two. Any kind of simple obedience to playing ball or any kind of agility builds constant trust and reinforces companionship between you two.

If you'd like me to continue to reply through thread I will otherwise I can talk with you over skype any time you like (well, when you're off school and let me know to be on skype).

Thank you very much I appreciate the time you put in to post the reply

I have had a website for awhile but it's on weebly (sad face) so I'm hoping to be able to build some additional testimonials to post on there. I'm not an html coder so I'm not familiar with creating/establishing my own site as of yet.

I came up with "The pawfect trainer" about 7 years or so ago and a lot of people seem to like.

I am asked frequently about cats as well as I've been an avid fan of big cats since I was young and know quite a bit about them but not necessarily quite the expert as I am with dogs.

Again thanks for posting the comment

-What experiences do you have with dogs in general: I have one dog that lives with me that's already pretty trained.

-What kind of dog/puppy do you have/are you getting:chihuahua

-Age and sex of dog/puppy:2 years old and Female

-Describe your question or concern in as much detail as you Unfortunatly my grandfather recently passed away from colon cancer,and my whole family, especially my grandmother have been devastated by this, My grandmother and my grandfather had a chihuahua named "Tiger" a long time ago back when they lived in Alaska, and my grandmother has been quite lonely lately and i guess because chihuahua's remind her of my grandmother,she decided she really wanted to get one, so she looked for a total of 2 months before she found a chihuahua at a local pound that was recently brought in. here in Georgia (i guess they're not common here) and she instantly bought the cute little puppy, And my question is, can you help me train her to be a better dog? I'm not sure how her last owners treated her or where she lived/what kind of treatment she is used to. But she's semi-potty trained, by "semi" i mean that she knows to pee outside,but she doesnt go into the grass,she just steps 1 foot outside and pees on the carpet out there. That's all the dog seems to be trained in. Id love to know if you can help me improve that and also teach her other basic dog training skills, Such as "sit" "stay" "come",etc,etc. This is very important to me, and if your not still doing this for free I'm willing to pay you!

Thank you very much for the detailed reply, I am and will continue to offer this most definitely for cases exactly like yours

I am very sorry to hear about your grandpa I too lost mine to cancer and I was very close to him before his passing

I absolutely can help you to learn to train her as well as properly potty train

It is always a great thing when individuals can get their dogs from rescues or shelters but you do tend to have to put in more effort than usual to establish a proper psychological balance for the dog as you don't know their history often (as this case) and simply have to learn the dogs habits and behaviors and modify/improve

Being you're 16 I assume you have school so feel free to let me know when you have time available and I will certainly join in skype with you and get started when you're available but please make sure you have time so they're not simply 15 minute sessions as that will not help you.

Skype on your phone in this scenario will help a lot since you're trying to potty train to go outside as well

I would have actually gotten my friend a CKC but due to their shedding (which is a lot lol) I wasn't able to (allergies)

They are extremely friendly and very trainable

What kinds of things were you wanting to train?

Having behavioral concerns or you just want to do basic obedience?

Remember, they are a king's lap dog, they expect to be treated as such so keep that in the back of your mind. They're not overly stubborn or hard to deal with but they are the definition of a cuddle dog.

They are extremely friendly and very trainable

What kinds of things were you wanting to train?

Having behavioral concerns or you just want to do basic obedience?

I want to train him the basics and i am willing to put the time in. My main goal which is a big goal and i know it will take a lot of training to to let him run free and have him stay reasonable close and come when i call him he is a great loving dog but he has no training and will try to run away every chance he gets also if I let him sleep in my room at night he will pee and poop in the house unless he is in a crate which kills me to do it but I don't know how to efficiently train him.

So to clarify

- Basic obedience
- Walk without a leash
- Prevent potty inside the house (esp at night)
- Prevent crate usage as often as possible
- Does he not like the crate or is it more you personal preference. Neither one matters but I like to know.

And, how much time do you have and when do you have the time (of day) to skype live for proper practice?

ok this isn't at all a challenge

this kind of thing all starts with basic obedience and timely exercise which we will discuss more thoroughly over skype and in pm

Doncaster Rovers - March 23, 2015, 5:45 pm

Okay thank you i will PM you now and we can discuss this more.

ItsFluffy - March 24, 2015, 12:24 pm

sounds good i have added you on skype so feel free to let me know when you'd like to start

-How old are you (pertinent so I know my audience): 18

-What experiences do you have with dogs in general (previous dog owner, new dog owner, puppies, family, what?): My first dog

-What kind of dog/puppy do you have/are you getting: Jack Russel

-Age and sex of dog/puppy: 4years old, Femail

-Describe your question or concern in as much detail as you can:My dog used to run after other dogs and bark at then and get very aggressive but since she was attacked by two German shepherds, she is very scared of big dogs, so scared that if they come close to her, she will scream and try to run home, but she is find with smaller dogs however she does still act like before the attack with small dogs.

I do have all the requirements and will be very glad to get a reply back from you.

Thanks a lot for the service

Ah yes, believe it or not I enjoy dealing with these cases because it's when you truly get to see just how smart and adaptive dogs truly are.

Jack russels are super trainable but you need A LOT OF PATIENCE!

They are in my opinion the most active dogs I've ever trained.

They can run for hours, play fetch, etc, and after 4 hours of non stop running you can come inside and they'll still act like they never went out.

The fear of other dogs if she was attacked is completely reasonable but we need to break her mindset of believing all dogs (bigger than her) are going to hurt her and this is 100% up to you to correct.

Dogs unlike us can get past fear VERY quickly if the have the right associations shown to them.

So, if you have the time and patience I'd love to help you with this
