Thread: Panda or BitDefender?

Kyrus - February 18, 2015, 2:09 pm

Hey guys help me decide on which AntiVirus I should use!

I was planning to get Panda but my friend who does Computer Security for a living is telling me to get BitDefender.

For my AntiMalware I'm getting MalwareBytes.

FRANKIE - February 18, 2015, 2:10 pm

I would recommend BitDefender.

Panda gives you this flashy trial and then spams your PC with ads and naggs you to buy premium.

Neither get ESET..reason I think its more thorough in preventing infection or you can get Avast likewise.

He has a great point,my only defense is when checking on my stubs the first AV to detect it as malware usually is ESET. Go with Aura he is more versed in this I guess.

See the stats for yourself: <http://www.av-test.org/en/antivirus/home-windows/>

Bitdefender is ranked far higher than Panda.

Best is malware bytes. Can never get my rat to be not detected by malwarebytes. But if I only had two choices BitDefender by farrrr. Panda is shit. It cant even detect uncrpyted darkcomet stubs.

BitDefender for sure. Lightweight and fast. The BD Team are quick to help out if you have any issues..

Panda has upped its game lately, Eset Nod32 still takes it for me. Lite on resources, detection is nice. my opinion

MalwareBytes isn't an antivirus.

There's a difference between AV and AM.

Thesse - February 18, 2015, 11:24 pm

Between those I'd say BitDefender, and my recommendation is ESET for sure.

Chronos46and2 - February 19, 2015, 9:33 am

I appreciate that tidbit of info, -Hyperion. I had not seen that one yet. Good stuff. I don't if this makes much of a difference, but I don't have that version. It's also bundled with a few extra layers of defense that play nicely together. I can't tell the difference if there is much lag. That being said when my license runs out, I may try something else out. PEACE

Malwarebytes isn't a AV, why can't you people just get this already...

Shifty™ - February 22, 2015, 4:59 am

I will recommand Bitdefender, it is lite and fast! :D

In the past I used Norton, but that is crap

No need to be like that with that Attitude.

Simply BitDefender is better option. You can search online as well writing who is better. I am using this for several years and never disappointed.
