

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Reseller Hosting

iCodeCrap - February 23, 2015, 3:35 am

I'm thinking about getting a "hosting company" going. If I set this up the way I plan to (the right way), given all of the competition is it still profitable?

Y0ix - February 23, 2015, 8:42 am depends if you can give a good services and better prices than most of them then yes you can still sell hosting :)

C?a?r?bon - February 23, 2015, 6:00 pm

It depends, reseller hosting is profitable because of the low start up costs. But if you want to provide quality hosting reseller is not the way to go. You are limited to the support you can give because all you have access to is whm..

iCodeCrap - February 23, 2015, 6:36 pm

(Feb 23, 2015 07:00 PM)C?a?r?bon Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It depends, reseller hosting is profitable because of the low start up costs. But if you want to provide quality hosting reseller is not the way to go. You are limited to the support you can give because all you have access to is whm..

I found a reliable company, but can you get more in depth of how I would be limited to support?

C?a?r?bon - February 23, 2015, 7:50 pm

(Feb 23, 2015 07:36 PM)iCodeCrap Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I found a reliable company, but can you get more in depth of how I would be limited to support? Say a customer has a specific error that they get that cant be solved with whm/cpanel configuration, you would have to then make a support ticket with your host to fix the problem for you.