Thread: Cryptsy Voting Script

Abraham Lincoln - February 28, 2015, 8:29 pm

I made a userscript that submits votes for any coin on Cryptsy.com. It uses CryptsyPoints to purchase the votes. You will need a userscript plugin in your browser. You can use GreaseMonkey in Firefox, or TamperMonkey in Chrome.

You can then download and install the script from here: <https://omnicha.in/voting.user.js>

Once installed, just go to the coin vote page, click on the coin you want to vote for (OMC), and click on submit vote. Another window will popup that will ask you the number of points to use. 1 point = 5 votes. Click on Submit Votes and wait for it to finish. An alert will display when it has completed. It takes around half a second per vote.

I'll be using the script later this week when I purchase the CP.

This is really helpful for people who will be buying larger amounts of votes, I'll consider using it myself. Nice work as always Abe!

Thanks for doing that Abe. That will makes things a lot easier for the big voters :)

This will make my life so much easier. Now to buy some more Cryptsypoints. :)

EDIT: Script is working well.

Voting is important but number of users for the coins is important factors as well.

Just updated the script. You will probably have to redownload.

Fixed a few bugs and added in a progress bar.

Nice script. I'll use it tomorrow and put in a couple hundred votes if possible

Are Cryptsy Points cheaper to vote with than just sending bitcoin to the voting address?

Yes.

Btc votes cost 0.0002 btc per vote

Cryptsy votes cost 0.00012 btc per vote

I was just curious, I haven't ever used Cryptsy. I should probably register and at least give the free vote.

Voted for OMC!

BTW what are cryptsy points?

They're basically reward points that you get for trading on Cryptsy. The more you trade, the more you get. If you're going to submit paid votes, it's better to exchange your BTC to CryptsyPoints and then vote, it's cheaper than just using BTC.
