Thread: Dank, fresh thread design

_FRACTURED - March 7, 2015, 11:51 pm

I've been doing thread designs for people and I think this is my best one so far. Opinions?

Created using Photoshop, fonts are Lato and Roboto.

I have to say, I really like this thread design. You should give it away ;-)

Very, very, very basic. Simple use of text/colors and a few images with low opacity/fill. However, it's a good starting point. I'd recommend a few things straight away such as using smaller font size, having more spacing and adding more detail into the boxes with just a solid color. Nevertheless, best of luck with your designing.

Thank you for your feedback! I tried to make it a super simple design, and I always make the text a bit too big so I'll have to get over doing that somehow.

so simple but it looks very nice.

one thing i would change, text under About is aligned to the left, i would rather center it like you did under terms of service.

The simplicity is what makes this design so good. I can see that you have spent time to learn from where others make mistakes. Text size is a perfect, colours make It easy to read and are not straining on the eyes. A solid 10/10 good effort.

Looks great! I am just a little confused to why there is a picture of a mountain in the background... xD Ohh well! Nice thread design

I find pictures of nature look good in thread designs. Besides, I dunno what I would put there.

This is very clear and easy to read, I would give it a 8/10.

A 10/10 tends to be like a slide show, astro made an amazing one for PF I believe.

DOSH - March 8, 2015, 11:55 am

I love it as it is very clear with a smooth design.
10/10 keep up the good work!

So you know how to use google's material design principles, now try something new. Be creative and push the boundaries.

nice easy and simple design and it look great !:)

Stu-Pot - March 15, 2015, 7:21 am

It is indeed fresh but the font is a bit too big!

nilson1337 - March 15, 2015, 10:04 am

That looks good as fuck. Good Job m8.
