So finally, my hard work has payed off. I have recently received my football contract to join a academy. Millwall to be precise. A pretty big team, in the championship league ?

Kudos to me ?

Congratulations! I had a similar offer with Charlton, messed it up though.

Best of luck dude. ?

Aha, that's a great news. What position do you play at? And you think you'll break into the first team in coming years?

Congrats btw.

Congrats man, Hopefully in the comings years I would want to play football at a good level or move to the USA to go on a scholarship in some schools playing football.

I was actually playing left back and center back, however, I thought I'd start training to be a left midfielder/winger, and I've actually adapted better to the LM/LW role due to my pace. I don't think I'll be going to play at the back anytime soon again ? Hopefully I will break into the first time. This is one out of many contracts, but I think I'm going for this one.

I also have Thurrock waiting for my answer, and I'm due to go and trial down at Arsenal in April.

USA Scholarships are better apparently. I was going to go out there to do a scholarship.

Have you played in big teams before or is this your first 'break'? Would love to try get into a proper team but I thought 19 would be way too old.

What position do you play? This is my first break at this level. You still have time, my friend. Never give up, you're nowhere near to late. People like Didier Drogba, Ian Wright, and Rickie Lambert all started late. Go for it ?

Thanks again for the praise.

Arsenal in April, make sure you nail it. ? You don't want to miss a chance working with Thierry Henry, do you? Btw how old are you?

That's awesome man, all the best!

Milwall trials. From there, I was approached by Thurrock & Arsenal.
