Vitani's Mate - March 21, 2015, 5:08 am

Seriously.. Getting limited wasn't bad enough but STEALING... YES... STEALING $650 FROM MY FUCKING ACCOUNT! Well.. Well... Bend me over in the prison showers and fuck me mercilessly in the asshole with a big black cock.. This is a fucking new one.. Thanks Paypal.. I don't have ANY money in my paypal account...

Like... What the fuck just happened?

Also I cannot make a deal dispute. Once again.. Paypal fucked me over..

dragonhuman - March 21, 2015, 5:09 am

Why did they take $650 from you? :O

DLT. - March 21, 2015, 5:10 am

That is strange, and the first time i've heard about this.. what gives them the right to take $650?! Did you have an additional PP account which had a negative balance or something?

SIM-2223238 - March 21, 2015, 5:35 am

They cant just take money from you, give them a call.

I know how you feel kinda, my reason was more or less my fault but I had an two accounts with negative balances on them because people charged back on me so I abandoned ship and now they limited my main PayPal and said I need to resolve those issues so they make me pay $140 frekien dollars then just said, yeah nah your permanently limited.

Damn cock munchers.

Call them, yell at them.

Suspense - March 21, 2015, 6:18 am

I'm pretty sure they can't just fuck you over with a $650 withdrawal. In legal eyes this is paypal stealing from you. Unless they have a valid reason to take the money (i.e. breaking their T&Cs) then they can't take the money from you like that.

Best thing to do is write down all the details you have related to your paypal account, give them a call and talk disgustedly at them. Your money will most likely get refunded if you play your cards right.

They legally have to issue you a reason why the money has been 'stolen' from your account. I'd suggest taking some legal action on this is the worst happens. $650 isn't exactly something that you can just ignore.

I wish you the best of luck getting your money back man. Really sad to see paypal fucking people over like this. This kinda supports why a lot of people on here have switched to crypto currencies as their primary source of funds.

Vitani's Mate - March 21, 2015, 6:34 am

They're currently investigating two of my transactions which is a total sum of $200, I'm most likely going to get analled the same way you did. Wish there was an alternative that is widely used, I'm getting really sick of their shit now as I'm sure you all are.

There is some reason for them doing this. Standard protocol is they release your funds after 180 days. Chill out and wait until you call them up so you can see what the deal is. I doubt they would just take $600 from you because that probably would be stealing. Unless someone bought $600 worth of carded goods then idk

I got limited but I know why I got fucked over $500+ but I owned a booter which is against their terms.

IntelliJ - March 21, 2015, 6:15 pm

The thing about PayPal is that they don't limit you or take money for absolutely no reason. Bottom line you, or someone who has access to your account, broke the PayPal terms of service and their regulations. The terms of service you agreed to upon signing up also say they can limit you and/or take money as needed if you breach their terms. As Ricky said, just switch payment processors if it's /that/ annoying.

If you aren't willing to call them and make a continued effort, then that money obviously doesn't mean that much to you. Users have told you how to get your money back, it's just a matter of you calling them and speaking with them on the matter. Figure out the reason it happened and see what you can do to "fix" that. Actually, PayPal's ToS states that you can own two accounts, one personal and one premier/business. The user probably didn't make sure to follow that, but it's a technicality worth noting.

if you call paypal and act really angry (if you already aren't enough) they probably send you your money back.

Coton Pker - April 4, 2015, 4:49 am

I remember having $750 withdrawn from my account because they found out I had sold RSGP.
that shit was tops... they gave me the actual reason really quick on the phone though.

mayb they just don't like aussies O.o

I've lost over $3500 from RSGP sales over the years... because back then there was absolutely no virtual item sales with PP allowed... and my account was closed and re-opened so many times lol.

and to this day, I still use paypal for buying shit on ebay...

Hey. - April 4, 2015, 4:54 am

That is ridiculous lol

ha4x0r - April 4, 2015, 4:57 am

You are all autistic if you think Paypal took 600 for no reason.

I cant do anything for another week since I am on holiday.

How stupid can you all be? Why I never had problems with PayPal. I never had any as I simply stick to their Tos and do not violate them. Tell the reason why they "stole" your money... they won't steal it just like that. The fault is most likely in you, yet you have to blame someone else. You are all quite dumb if you really belive they steal money from accounts and limit them for no reason.
