MonarchXD - March 23, 2015, 11:21 am

I have received a vouch and this is my review

The site is made very well, you can tell they did not make this site in 1 hour they made sure it works fast. site design 9/10

how fast the build was made, It only took me about 1 second for the build to be made for speed on the build is 10/10

I will be adding more reveiw once I have played around with it a little more, but otherwise don't hesitate to buy from this user this is very hq

Spooky Skeleton - March 23, 2015, 11:21 am

Currently there is no support for cookie stealing yet but that's mainly because this is the first version. Will work on it.

Although it is written in Java it does not support stealing from Mac computers yet. This will come later when I got everything running good.

You can still give it to people who are on Windows though.

This is not meant to bypass 2FA and it not focused on stealing google accounts. This program steals all remembered passwords and will send them to your email.

inkbird - March 25, 2015, 2:19 pm

How do you spread? Do I get a generated link which the victim must click or do I get a exe file which has to be executed by victim?

MrOrang - March 25, 2015, 3:25 pm

(Mar 25, 2015 02:19 PM)inkbird Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How do you spread? Do I get a generated link which the victim must click or do I get a exe file which has to be executed by victim?

You build a jar file(works same as exe but Java makes it FUD). Then you send that file to someone and when he/she clicks on it it executes. Due to our techniques used it should only take a minute to get all credentials in your mail. None of your information is stored in the build. Only a unique id used to get your information(email, license etc..) from our server.

The format on what you will get in the mail is the following:

Code Website: thewebsiteurl

User: the recovered username

Password: the recovered password

I understand your argument but this program is meant for mass spreading or a simple effective recovery. It requires next to no setup(no port forwarding, installing of programs) which means it's really easy to use.

Oh and with the new features coming there will be more possibilities with this. Price will increase a bit though as you can read in the op.

You send the jar to someone if he opens it all his saved logins are getting emailed to your email :)

(Mar 28, 2015 06:10 PM)LessThan3 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So how exactly does this work? This gets me passwords from anyone's chrome?

When a build is generated you receive a jar file. If you execute that jar file it may take a minute but it will recover all remembered chrome passwords and send them to the specified email.

(Mar 29, 2015 12:33 AM)xadamxk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Wait I have a question.

How do you use this?

By implementing the code into your site and having someone visit it?

Maybe I'm just tired, or stupid, or both.

Edit: I just read the post before mine. So it used Java.

Is there a way then to use a Java-Drive-By to get this to work with a site?

When you build you get a jar, when that is ran it will send all recovered credentials to your selected mail.

You could add this to a JDB but you'd have to mess with security policies if you want this inside the applet(could also download & execute). This is not meant for a JDB though and is just a program.

Update: I am currently working on a keylogger feature which you can control from the website. Stay tuned.

UPDATE #2: I have almost finished the keylog feature. Here's a preview of the build page: Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Hopefully I finish the panel today!

Everyone who bought it when it was $10 has luck because now the starting price is $15 :p

like bind it to a minecraft launcher.

but then it should have the function that you cant get spammed with the same data because that would be annoying

Alright, I think I know how to do this but it won't be on the web page so you'll have to download a program to do it because it would be way too resource intensive then.

Changelog for today(there will be more for today):

- Added ability to remove keylogged bots/clients
- Fixed the textarea sizing problem(should now have a scrollbar)
- Some backend optimizations

I'll be working on that single execution thingy soon(shouldn't take too long) and will be working on a jar binder soon.

Today is my birthday but family is not coming over until sunday so yea

The binder would also be in Java, it'd be a free download of course.
Hoping to have all new features done by the weekend.

UPDATE: Hoping to finish the wait period time format, the one time steal feature(I'll make it optional) and obfuscate the build so people do not know what it is.

Also hoping to finish the jar binder this weekend. I have some rl stuff to do though.

Update 2: Added run-once feature to builder and fixed the build delay time format(now displays countdown correctly).

Update 3: I have obfuscated the builds, please pm me if you run into any problems.

Here's a sneak preview of the jar binde I am working on. Hope to have the internals finished by the weekend.

If you use the same email that ur Chrome recognize, it will look like this:

<https://gyazo.com/577c5c887ecef6d3483683b508f4537> (that yellow thingy)

Clean ur saved emails in ur chrome settings or whatever it is, or just use another email. That worked fine for me.

It does not say it is a safari stealer so no, it does not steal safari and the keylogger works on the entire computer(Even tested onscreen keyboard on windows).

(May 6, 2015 01:50 AM)alphaomega Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Can you please explain whats the workflow working with that?

When you purchase ChromeStealer you receive a license key in your mail from payivy. Then you register at the link which was given in the mail, you just enter your stuff and license and register. Then you'll be brought to a builder page(You need to click a link) and you'll be asked to bookmark the page. The next step is to build your jar which looks like this: <http://prntscr.com/723sfy>

When you click build you get a download to your build jar. When double clicked it may take a minute to fully load due to loading techniques but then it should recover the chrome passwords and send a mail out from our website. When checking your mail also check your spam folder if you did not receive anything.

When run-once is selected it does a check if the stealer already ran. If it did it just skips the entire stealing process.

If you selected keylogging it will launch a keylogger no matter if you selected run-once. You can check all keystrokes from the web panel which looks like this: screenshots \(Click to View\)

That's basically it.
