Thread: Annoying Things HF Users Say and Do

Tonight - March 23, 2015, 6:48 pm

Rep whores, group whores, award whores, post whores in general Attributes of rep whores usually include a superficial attitude of kindness and excessive +3'ing of other ub3rs for irrelevant and/or dumb reasons.

Attributes of group whores are usually pretentiousness and irrelevant comments throughout the 'Groups and Crews General Discussion' forum.

Attributes of award whores are superficial attitudes and tryhardish behavior, i.e. making a thread about how much they love sushi.

Attributes of post whores are obvious; their posts contribute hardly or none to the discussion at hand. Being an Odd Future fan. Quote an unfunny joke saying "Thank you for posting this, it made my day! ?" or something stupid along those lines. Make terrible troll attempts such as being the leader of Anonymous. Further beating the dead horse by making blatantly cringe worthy posts on said thread like "I'm going to hack you with CMD" because they think the use of irony is clever and witty. Addressing everyone as if they were businessmen by calling them 'sir'. Typing in all lowercase or l33t speak, once again, as an attempt to be edgy and ironic. Have avatars and signatures of immature things, usually half naked women and marijuana propaganda. Leaving vouches on things that are not in the marketplace with stupid unrelated posts such as, "Vouch for this user, he likes to lick ice cream ;)" Attempting to backseat moderate the RANF section and acting like a tool. These users are usually very pretentious and tend to be rep whores. Try way too hard to troll and post replies like "Kill yourself, you are a fag" on threads warranting real responses. Also the users who just suggest fighting or killing someone as advice on a serious thread. Put their username at the end of their posts as a signature as if we didn't know their username was right next to the post. Using a cliché post signature like, 'Kind regards' at the end of your posts. Make help desk threads like they are experts on particular subjects. Even if they are experts, the majority of the thread is just senseless vouches from the user's friends. Act blatantly homosexual as a joke and use wink face emoticons and hearts excessively in their posts. Non-upgraded members constantly complaining about ub3rs 'abusing their power' because they were negative repped. Asskiss. Whether it be staff, mentors, group owners, whatever. Make "approved for ub3r" threads despite them being disallowed. Having 'approved for ub3r' as a usertitle or signature is just as bad because that means you don't have $18 to spare and you likely shouldn't have applied in the first place if you're that broke. Quote the entire OP when responding to a thread. When people edit or change their avatar/usertitle/signature/userbar multiple times in very short periods of time because they don't know what they like. Get roasted and then try and play it off with jokes or by just agreeing with what the roaster said, i.e "Yeah man, I'm so gay, you found me out". Make cent giveaways for the sole intention of gaining quick reputation or burying a recent -3. Having amazon wishlists in their signature because they have this sense of entitlement and believe they deserve gifts from random strangers on the internet. Typing like (and I don't mean this to offend anyone) an indian or native, i.e "Hey Guys , Just registered On The Forums . ??". Buy group leadership and member spots when they have only been on the forum for less than a year. Call people 'kids' when they are likely under the age of 18 themselves. Brag about their drug use with no validation of their claims. These users are top tier scum rats. When people use the word 'nigga' to fit in and are white. Ungrateful brats. Complain about their parents or guardian when they are under the age of 18 and live off of this person. Intentionally post and speak in the way this very thread ridicules on this thread.

Will update whenever I come across more things that tick me off or things are suggested that also upset me.

However, I think vouches are kind of needed. Especially in the marketplace, it's just assuring you that the deal at hand will be legitimate. Regardless if it's a stupid homosexual comment. I see where you're coming from though.

Attributes of group whores are usually pretentiousness and irrelevant comments throughout the 'Groups and Crews General Discussion' forum.

Attributes of award whores are superficial attitudes and tryhardish behavior, i.e. making a thread about how much they love sushi.

Attributes of post whores are obvious; their posts contribute hardly or none to the discussion at hand. Quote an unfunny joke saying "Thank you for posting this, it made my day! ?" or something stupid along those lines. Make terrible troll attempts such as being the leader of Anonymous. Further beating the dead horse by making blatantly cringe worthy posts on said thread like "I'm going to hack you with CMD" because they think the use of irony is clever and witty. Addressing everyone as if they were businessmen by calling them 'sir'. Typing in all lowercase or l33t speak, once again, as an attempt to be edgy and ironic. Have avatars and signatures of immature things, usually half naked women and marijuana propaganda. Leaving vouches on things that are not in the marketplace with stupid unrelated posts such as, "Vouch for this user, he likes to lick ice cream ;)" Attempting to backseat moderate the RANF section and acting like a tool. These users are usually very pretentious and tend to be rep whores. Try way too hard to troll and post replies like "Kill yourself, you are a fag" on threads warranting real responses. Also the users who just suggest fighting or killing someone as advice on a serious thread. Put their username at the end of their posts as a signature as if we didn't know their username was right next to the post. Act blatantly homosexual as a joke and use wink face emoticons and hearts excessively in their posts. Asskiss. Whether it be staff, mentors, group owners, whatever. Make "approved for ub3r" threads despite them being disallowed. Having 'approved for ub3r' as a usertitle or signature is just as bad because that means you don't have $18 to spare and you likely shouldn't have applied in the first place if you're that broke. Quote the entire OP when responding to a thread. Get roasted and then try and play it off with jokes or by just agreeing with what the roaster said, i.e "Yeah man, I'm so gay, you found me out". Make cent giveaways for the sole intention of gaining quick reputation or burying a recent -3. Buy group leadership and member spots when they have only been on the forum for less than a year. Call people 'kids' when they are likely under the age of 18 themselves. Intentionally post and speak in the way this very thread ridicules on this thread.

Will update whenever I come across more things that tick me off or things are suggested that also upset me. *Quote the entire OP when responding to a thread. I know right? most annoying shit ever.

(Mar 23, 2015 06:48 PM)Satu Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Rep whores, group whores, award whores, post whores in general Attributes of rep whores usually include a superficial attitude of kindness and excessive +3'ing of other ub3rs for irrelevant and/or dumb reasons.

Attributes of group whores are usually pretentiousness and irrelevant comments throughout the 'Groups and Crews General Discussion' forum.

Attributes of award whores are superficial attitudes and tryhardish behavior, i.e. making a thread about how much they love sushi.

Attributes of post whores are obvious; their posts contribute hardly or none to the discussion at hand. Being an Odd Future fan. Quote an unfunny joke saying "Thank you for posting this, it made my day! ?" or something stupid along those lines. Make terrible troll attempts such as being the leader of Anonymous. Further beating the dead horse by making blatantly cringe worthy posts on said thread like "I'm going to hack you with CMD" because they think the use of irony is clever and witty. Addressing everyone as if they were businessmen by calling them 'sir'. Typing in all lowercase or l33t speak, once again, as an attempt to be edgy and ironic. Have avatars and signatures of immature things, usually half naked women and marijuana propaganda. Leaving vouches on things that are not in the marketplace with stupid unrelated posts such as, "Vouch for this user, he likes to lick ice cream ;)" Attempting to backseat moderate the RANF section and acting like a tool. These users are usually very pretentious and tend to be rep whores. Try way too hard to troll and post replies like "Kill yourself, you are a fag" on threads warranting real responses. Also the users who just suggest fighting or killing someone as advice on a serious thread. Put their username at the end of their posts as a signature as if we didn't know their username was right next to the post. Using a cliché post signature like, 'Kind regards' at the end of your posts. Make help desk threads like they are experts on particular subjects. Even if they are experts, the majority of the thread is just senseless vouches from the user's friends. Act blatantly homosexual as a joke and use wink face emoticons and hearts excessively in their posts. Non-upgraded members constantly complaining about ub3rs 'abusing their power' because they were negative repped. Asskiss. Whether it be staff, mentors, group owners, whatever. Make "approved for ub3r" threads despite them being disallowed. Having 'approved for ub3r' as a usertitle or signature is just as bad because that means you don't have $18 to spare and you likely shouldn't have applied in the first place if you're that broke. Quote the entire OP when responding to a thread. When people edit or change their avatar/usertitle/signature/userbar multiple times in very short periods of time because they don't know what they like. Get roasted and then try and play it off with jokes or by just agreeing with what the roaster said, i.e "Yeah man, I'm so gay, you found me out". Make cent giveaways for the sole intention of gaining quick reputation or burying a recent -3. Having amazon wishlists in their signature because they have this sense of entitlement and believe they deserve gifts from random strangers on the internet. Typing like (and I don't mean this to offend anyone) an indian or native, i.e "Hey Guys , Just registered On The Forums . ??". Buy group leadership and member spots when they have only been on the forum for less than a year. Call people 'kids' when they are likely under the age of 18 themselves. Brag about their drug use with no validation of their claims. These users are top tier scum rats. When people use the word 'nigga' to fit in and are white. Ungrateful brats. Complain about their parents or guardian when they are under the age of 18 and live off of this person. Intentionally post and speak in the way this very thread ridicules on this thread.

Will update whenever I come across more things that tick me off or things are suggested that also upset me.

i need more group user bars ,,, as well this whole thread made my day . THANK YOU <3 ,,, for this thread ?

i love to smoke that weed ,,, man so GOOOD ,,, my stupid parents wont by me anyMORE i ?

I think users that create cringe worthy threads should be added, or ones that attempt to troll. Other than that, hats off to you.

Both of these ones annoy the hell out of me...

First one not so much, dont affect me at this point, but if your gonna give something out, include everyone.

New members need love too. <3

The second one is just annoying for me as a seller.

Vouch or trial copies.

No I am not wasting my time to go generate a license key so you can screw around for free. Simple as that. lol

E-book vouch requests are even funnier. People asking for saturated methods to give a "vouch" loool

Wolf - June 9, 2018, 6:04 am

It's completely irrational, but most of the smileys on HF get on my nerves. Especially when posters use 30 in one post

For me the worst are the people who make a thread on a topic I really want to know more about re monetizing but when I PM them to ask for more info they just troll me with nonsense replies because I guess they're 14.

I got a warning for posting 5 once to get around the character limit when I was a noob. If you wanted to be an ahole you could report. 30 or 12 would probably come under LQ.
