WARNING from the two I tested (I believe they are all the same) you can't actually do anything, it makes you do a survey so from the ones that have actually done the survey I don't believe this works and is real. OP can you prove that by completing set survey we will actually get the stuff.

OP i think some people here don't get what this is for.

Sheesh - March 26, 2015, 10:52 pm

Ahhhh guys

These are NOT REAL HACKS. These are for CPA / PPD purposes :)

HelpingOthers - March 27, 2015, 1:05 am

Well for people who don't understand this section, OP has given you his generators which you can see and use as reference to make your own one. These work great because they fool most of people in believing they actually work.

You can't redirect people to your survey link. It's just for reference that's it.

OP may I have a DL link? Thanks

Zedo - March 27, 2015, 1:41 am

Review:

Basically, these all seem to be the exact same web file just with a different image, some altered text, sometimes a little change to the js. You'll have to add a new-tab redirection to your survey or add the popup to appear on that page to unlock and then to enter in the required code to "unlock" said surprise or generated item promised.

For one say, Facebook, it does seem to fetch the names and detect incorrect entries so the code inside of these can be used for your own skinned website, or you can simply alter what is already in here.

You'll definitely need to find new images as they are already branded with the original creator but that is no more than an hour of your own time.

Overall, it's a bunch of good niches and a decent starter pack. If you're going to use this, my advice is that you do, and I mean do, rework the code to make it unique to yourself.

Other than that, you can essentially buy a domain that may fit all of these, load them up and then provide links and a redirection to them.

So, once again. If you're starting out, this is a pretty decent starter pack, get it while OP wants to bother with releasing. :P
