

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Was Anohana really that sad?

BlakkHeart - March 27, 2015, 11:54 pm

So i listened to a couple suggestions from people that said Anohana would make me cry for days and to be honest it really wasn't that sad. The only part that even had me think it was sad was the ending. I don't know if it's because i've seen sadder anime like Clannad, Angel Beats 5 Centimeters per second etc. or is it that i couldn't really relate because it seemed kinda childish? tell me what you guys think

Chips Ahoy McCoy - March 28, 2015, 12:21 am

Not sure how anyone could possibly not cry from Anohana. Clannad was extremely boring imo.

zyvox - March 28, 2015, 3:00 am

Umm got more sad from Anohana than Clannad myself. I think it's more because maybe you don't think that's so sad, because after all...

Anohana spoilers (Click to View) It was a good ending iirc? They even got to see her, so it actually turned out better than it started!

People find different things sad. Clannad didn't touch me too much either. The thing that gets me emotional is when things end.

Anohana spoilers (Click to View) Seeing them getting together and being all happy and stuff for a moment and then suddenly it ends and then the white girl leaves forever is kind of sad in my eyes.

Clannad AS spoilers (Click to View) On the other hand, seeing the mother die didn't touch me even the slightest. The kid kind of did. What did touch me, was to see Tomoya and the kid build a great relationship and everything going well and then having the series end. It was a happy ending for the characters, but not for me because I grew to like the show.

So yeah no idea about you but that's what I find sad. A lot of emotional things others get worked up over or "cry for days" for barely touches me at all, and at the same time there's a lot of people who get happy when good shows finish etc as where I get sad over that.

I also think how fast you watch a show has an impact on the emotional part of it. If you binge a show you may or may not be struck with a huge void. If you watch one episode a week you're gonna have a very hard time getting emotional over it. If you watch perhaps a few episodes a day it might work on longer shows but Anohana is pretty short, so not sure about that. (Personal experience)

Lyrlei - March 28, 2015, 3:01 am

It is, It's definitely on a different level compared to Clannad or 5cmp/s imo =>

Ang?I - March 28, 2015, 9:30 am

you cried because of Angel Beats but not Anohana

okay