You can make it using Adobe After Effects, I'm not really familiar with it, but I know it's done with that software. You can find many useful tutorials on Youtube. :)

I don't understand, are you asking about how to increase the frame rate? or create the effects.

Has render settings, frame speeds, etc etc..

Looks like your issue is that you are keeping the frames at 0 seconds, which browsers don't like for some reason, change all your frame's to a 0.03 delay.

When you put a video into photoshop as layers it gives you several options, one of them is to only import every 2 video frames instead of one, this might be the problem OP since that happened to me too, the gif was laggy as hell.
