Thread: [\[Discussion\] Yahari Ore no Seishun Love Comedy wa Machigatteiru. Zoku / Oregairu 2](#)

VYKTOR - April 3, 2015, 2:11 am

MAL

Synopsis of Oregairu:

This romantic comedy revolves around an antisocial high school student named Hikigaya Hachiman with a distorted view on life and no friends or girlfriend. When he sees his classmates talking excitedly about living their adolescent lives, he mutters: "They're a bunch of liars." When he is asked about his future dreams, he responds, "Not working." A teacher gets Hachiman to join the "Volunteer Service" club, which happens to have the school's prettiest girl, Yukinoshita Yukino.

Summary:

Second season of Yahari Ore no Seishun Love Comedy wa Machigatteiru.

Air Date: 3rd April, 2015

Expectations:

I think this is gonna be more better than the first season since there has been improvement in the animation & the characters got more closer. Other than that we'll see for ourselves today.

Use Spoilers while discussing about the latest episodes.

The animation wasn't improved at all lol... it looks so generic and low budget.

Studio Feel is at it again--ruining good source materials with its lack luster adaptations.

Watching it atm.

Hope it's good.

I'll give my opinion after I finish watching.

Just finished watching it & I really liked the first episode.

I missed Hachiman's soliloquy a lot.

This was quite funny & there was a bit improvement in the animation.

Really happy with the timing of the episodes every Friday.

I loved the first season and i didn't even know that the second season started airing today. Well i'll have to watch it later!

I just hope Hachiman's presentations come back :D

I loled so hard when he did that bears social behavior thingy in the first season.

VYKTOR - April 10, 2015, 12:24 am

The second episode was really good.

We see Hachiman doing things yet again in his own way.

It's pretty good, if anything, the animation upped-one it's fluidity and color contrast. Still, kinda feeling that Yukino and Hiki's face are drawn differently.

awesome, thanks for the update, loved the first season

Dragon. - April 11, 2015, 11:45 am

Man... that was a really good episode. So far, this is my favorite show airing this season.

I can't wait for next week.

Episode spoilers: \(Click to View\)

I think the problem behind Yui and Yukino's anger is because they hold feelings for our dear MC-kun and seeing him confess to another girl like that is really inconsiderate, even though it was fake. Adding on to that, the two never actually saw how Hachiman handles things his way--which leverages unorthodox tactics that have absolute disregard for the surroundings. In short, they're brutal, but damn effective. I think that Hachiman can come to resemble a "person" that lingers inside of everyone's heart. An evil (on the surface at least), coy, yet self-loathing part of ourselves that we hide away from human eyes because we are afraid of being ostracized (just like how Hachiman was in the anime).

Honestly, Hachiman's possibly one of the best MC's I've ever seen in a show. It's quite obvious to the viewer that his stoic, "I don't give a fuck" nature is there as more of a facade that actually hides all the pain and suffering behind the "mask" that he shows the world through the persona he created. He's like a pierrot.

Peanut Butter - April 11, 2015, 12:51 pm

Aside from the different designs for some of the characters (not that they're bad, I'm just not used to it), I'm liking this season just as much as the first. Feel better not disappoint.

Well, you should have done it quite early.

Hachiman is one of the most real protagonists I have ever seen in an anime.

Hearing his lines makes my day.

M0t4w - April 29, 2015, 8:28 pm

ineed, his dialogue is great.

Episode got really tense, I wasn't expecting blonde guy to look out for hikki like that.

fmmllll i hate waiting a week for a new episode. its torture.

I'm not digging the whole tension between the Hachiman and the other girl from the club.

Yet another nice episode.

Episode Spoilers \(Click to View\)

So it looks like Yukino is being dishonest here. She only acts on something when she has a reason to (that doesn't involve her own selfishness). Deep down, she really wanted to run for student council president, and used Iroha's request as leverage; however, once it appears that Hachiman (again) decided to act on his own accord and resolve the problem himself, she loses her reason to run. Thus, she withdraws from the election. She chooses to abandon her motive so as to not betray her own logic.

Houtarou - May 1, 2015, 8:00 pm

The most recent episode was again very good. For some reason, I feel like i can relate to Hachiman's character in general, which makes the show more enjoyable for me.

Yeah, I know she doesn't accept Hachiman's way of working & the way Hachiman acquired that fake support was also a wrong method.

In some ways, I feel sorry for her that she's trying to bring him to the correct way of working but he won't change so easily.

Watching Hachiman cry made me tear up ;-;

Dragon. - May 24, 2015, 11:56 am

I found this interpretation on MAL if anyone wants a good read (or didn't understand the few minutes in this episode):

Big block of text... also episode 8 summary/spoiler (Click to View)

Quote:This is how I understood the clubroom scene:

First of all, the initial positions and motivations of the club members are something like this:

Hachiman: I have come to understand that I want this club more than anything else and why. I know what I did wrong and why. I messed up big time on several occasions and I want to fix all of that now. There's only one way to do this. No more tricks. All I can do is be honest and hope that they'll understand me.

Yukino: This club is finished. All we're doing now is pointlessly keeping up appearances. Our bonds are shattered this easily, which only goes to show they were never real. We all know that this is the end.

Yui: I don't understand what the others are thinking. I don't want to lose this club. I just want everyone to get along and be happy again. But I don't know what to do.

Hachiman reveals his hand right from the start: He was wrong about lying and helping Iroha behind Yukino's and Yui's backs. He didn't manage to get the job done and he needs their help to fix everything. He caused problems for Iroha and Tsurumi. He can't fix this on his own, either. I guess he's trying to make amends for his mistakes by doing the 'right' thing this time, which is admitting that he was wrong and openly asking for help, as he should have done originally.

It's an ok plan, but it relies on whether or not Yui, and most importantly Yukino, can forgive him, and whether they are willing to help. This is his last chance, because Yukino has already given up - "You don't have to force yourself to show up anymore". Once she says the same to Yui, it's pretty much game over. If he does, however, manage to receive forgiveness and get the club to work on a task together (no solo trips for batman this time), he will have a chance to patch things up with Yui and Yukino again.

Yui is quick to forgive him. She never addressed the core of the matter. She doesn't understand why Yukino is acting the way she does. Yui just wants everyone to be friends again, but she has no means of achieving that. She hopes that the whole issue can be resolved if they all just talk to each other, thus she's happy about Hachiman initiating the conversation.

I'm not completely sure about this part, so it might be a bit of a stretch:

Hachiman claims that he is the cause of all problems and everything is his fault and his responsibility. His, and no one else's. Once again, everything is just about him. He might be willing to ask for help now, to share the workload, but he isn't sharing the responsibility.

So Yukino calls him out on that. If he truly believes that he is the only one at fault, the only one responsible, the one whose duty it is to fix the problem, then she can't help him. For Yukino, this indicates that Hachiman still hasn't changed. If he perceives himself as the center of everything, he will eventually do things by himself again, trampling on the feelings of those around him, just like he did with the confession and the student council thing. That's exactly why Yukino got mad at him in the first place. Sure, this time, Hachiman is asking for help. This time, he'll play nice and won't do the thing that Yukino hates. But what about next time? The reason why Hachiman goes full batman didn't change, thus he will still do things his way in the future, which means Yukino's issue with Hachiman remains unresolved. Nothing has changed, thus Hachiman and Yukino can't make up.

Hachiman's mistake is to perceive himself as the cause of all problems, not the club in its entirety. Yui actually caught onto that. And she spells it out for Hachiman: He actually isn't the only one at fault. All three of them were involved in Iroha's and Tsurumi's problems and all three of them are responsible for the outcome of those cases. But just saying this is far from enough to solve the conflict at hand. Hachiman insists on being the only one at fault and Yukino accuses Yui of playing dirty (for trying to guilt-trip her). "We're at fault too, so let's just make up" is not how this works. Hachiman hasn't really changed. Even if they make up now, they'll end up fighting for the exact same reason later on. The problem remains, and Yukino refuses to just gloss over it and pretend it didn't exist, because she hates this kind of superficiality.

The topic now changes to that very superficiality as Hachiman panics. He tried to resolve his conflict with the club, but instead caused a fight between Yui and Yukino. Yukino hints at what might be the cause for her behavior: Ever since the field trip, the club members were in a disagreement.

The atmosphere in the room was heavy. And yet they never actually addressed that disagreement. The only one who tried to was Yukino, but even she held back. Everyone chose to avoid the topic. Everyone was afraid that if they did, they would get in a fight and their friendship would end.

That IS understandable. Both Hachiman and Yukino admitted that talking things out is not a foolproof method. Just because you say what's on your mind doesn't mean the others will understand you. It's conceited to assume that the other party will understand you just from words. It's conceited to assume that you fully understand the other party from just words. Sometimes, no mutual understanding will be reached even if you speak from your heart.

But if there is no deep understanding between the club members, and not enough trust to address their problems, doesn't that make their relationship shallow?

I believe that is what made Yukino despair. When Hachiman goes in hero mode, he tramples upon Yui and Yukino's feelings. But otherwise, he acts nice around them, showing up in the clubroom and all, even lying to them (about Iroha) out of consideration. Yui acted like nothing was wrong. Thus Yukino concluded that these two were already considering their bonds superficial and decided to give up.

And that is when Hachiman overturns Yukino's misinterpretation by acting completely out of character. He sheds tears and reveals his selfish, deepest, darkest desire: Something genuine. The message has reached Yukino's heart. Right at this moment, she has no doubt that Hikigaya Hachiman is telling the truth. The very foundation for what made Yukino suffer was blown away. She was mistaken from the start. Hachiman never tried to support a superficial relationship. He tried to protect their bonds because they were precious to him. Otherwise, there would be no way someone like Hachiman would completely drop his guard before her and Yui and make himself this vulnerable.

Now that Yukino's reasoning was destroyed, she doesn't know what to believe. She's confused. She's shocked by Hachiman's honest display of feelings. "I don't understand." She has no idea what to do, or how to deal with this, so she runs away.

Hachiman is devastated. He really did everything he could. He took Yukino's escape as a rejection. It's game over.

Or so he thought, but Yui brought him back on track. Yukino didn't reject his plea, she's merely confused. But her heart has been swayed, so they need to press on right now.

In the end, the three of them did not reach a true understanding, but they did manage to convey their honest desire to each other: They all wish to stay together, from the bottom of their hearts.

Episode 8 was great. The drama felt a little bit forced though.

Well most of the episodes in the series makes no sense at first so you have to read a few discussions to really get a grasp of things.

There probably won't be any S3 as they covered all source material (Volume 12) of the light novel. The last episode was a cliffhanger to sell the final light novel 13 which is getting released soon. But,

I really hope we get a s3.

There probably won't be any S3 as they covered all source material (Volume 12) of the light novel. The last episode was a cliffhanger to sell the final light novel 13 which is getting released soon. But, I really hope we get a s3.

I haven't watched the subbed yet so I can't contribute to much of the discussion yet, although volume 11 only came out yesterday, so I think you heard wrong on that last bit.

That's what I heard too.

Episode 13 \(Click to View\)

The anime adapted up to volume 11. Blame Watari for how episode 13 ended (which just SCREAMS "BUY THE LIGHT NOVEL!")

Invincible - June 27, 2015, 4:06 am

Ah well I got confused on the LNs. Yes, the cliffhanger ending is just a way to sell the next LN.

I don't even mind commie being late because of that opening, I would've died crying if they kept that throughout the whole show.

Alright yeah, it's definitely one of those endings. Kinda sucks for us since unless we learn their language, we have to hope and wait that an English version will come to us or just read fan-translated light novels. I tried reading a fan-translated sao once but fuck that was annoying, they always left stuff like yes, huh, no as un, ee, and uun, as well as a few other things. I don't know why I put all this in a spoiler since it isn't one, but too late

Pretty bad ending, they left Yukino's conflict wide open, 80000kun still doesn't have his genuineness, I already wasn't team-yui but now even less, and worst of all, DID KOMACHI PASS HER ENTRANCE EXAMS!?

reading light novel sucks, i no longer have imagination :(
u know we watch anime bcz of cool graffics..

s3 please..

Spoiler \(Click to View\) That's what I fucking thought, however, I didn't think it that was the actual meaning behind it, as it's a bit simple for the show's taste. I really thought they wouldn't have made such a simple topic so dramatic. I'm kind of relieved and disappointed now. All I've watched the show for up until now is to see if Hikki and Yukino get together, but it was kind of on the backburner for awhile. Hell, at some points, I thought that Yui and Yukino would end up resenting him. God damn it. If they don't make a season 3 I'll cry. Now I'm not sure if I like or dislike the finale. I should just read the manga..

Well the sad thing is it's a Light Novel not a manga. Basically wall of text with very few pictures (about 1 or 2).

Well, whatever. I guess we should hope for a season 3 in a few years.

I just watched this a few hours ago because I was quite busy for the past three weeks with my home shifting & all.

Dafuq was wrong with the ending.

This is the type of ending which I hate the most when they leave things on a low note with everything in chaos.

Gosh, when's the next LN coming out.

I want my peace back.

Armady1 - August 8, 2016, 3:11 am

When do you guys think season 3 will come out now? or even volume 12 for the LN

The romance starts out slow, but speeds up as the anime goes on.

Ooo. I actually really enjoyed this anime. This romance was subtle; however, to this day I still don't know what Yukinon wished for in the end.

Second season eh'? I've watched the first, didn't really cared about the 2nd, I guess I'll give it a try now then!

I actually think the second season was significantly better than the first.
