Thread: Screenshot capture tool & automatic upload to private host

N1nj4Styl3 - April 7, 2015, 2:52 pm

Hello there,

I just found an old source code which I modified for a friend of mine.

He found & modified a shared source code to fit his needs and due to him being busy he asked me to continue the work.

The features that it has:

Screen capture

Auto-upload screenshots to your private host

Unique screenshot ID's

Easy to use

Cool design

Picture

My wallpaper in case I get asked

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Why to use this tool?

-Easy to use

-Free of charge

-Source code available

-Privacy protection

-Private hosting/uploading/backup

-Unique

Download link: HEX:

//EDIT: In order to make the application upload the screenshots to your webhost you must change the following values: ftppath, ftppass, ftpuser.

ftppath = the path which should the image follow so it can be saved (Example:

public_html/Screenshots/)

ftppass = your FTP password

ftpuser = your FTP username

The right syntax of the ftppath is; "public_html/Screenshots/" & nameofthescreenshot & ".jpg" (or whatever format you want).

You replace "public_html/Screenshots/" with your path. Don't forget the last slash, it's needed, else you should put it like that: "public_html/Screenshots" & "/" & nameofthescreenshot & ".jpg" (or whatever format you want).

Yes, I didn't know that it's against their TOS to upload zip files. Download link updated. ?

Really though this is nice OP. If you want to challenge yourself, try to re-create ShareX. It's made in .Net so everything it does should be just as possible as what you posted.

Nice wallpapers you got there!

Well.. no time for me. I'm extremely busy IRL. Might do it some other time. Thanks for the nice words though. ?

Nice screenshot application with FTP upload and use of pictureboxes instead of buttons ?

I don't know if you are sarcastic.. but its useful. Pictures boxes were used so it can stay as flat as possible.

Whats more, it saves the screenshot in your desktop (default) + uploads it to your ftp server. ?

Wish I could share more valuable stuff than this one, but as I said, it was for a friend of mine who wanted me to work a little on it. ?

lol i got the source code to a long time ago and wanted to fix it and re upload it but you beat me to it! ahahaha!

NUFC - April 10, 2015, 9:12 am

Very nice source Thank you. Would there be a way to encrypt the way it uploads to the FTP as plaintext password would be a risk.

No problem.. now the job is done ?

Good luck on getting it more advanced. :)

It's intended for private use. Encrypting it would make it more advanced. You would need a private server which would receive commands through packets, the server from its side will be uploading the images and you would get just the link.

You can google it: Server - Client communication. GL on that ?

N1nj4Styl3 - April 17, 2015, 5:37 pm

Replaced the download link with a hex instead. Convert the hex into text.

Thank you! ?

Nice work there homie ;) Thanks for the share... I'm sure this will get used a lot by users on HF ;)

LordCoder - April 18, 2015, 3:27 am

Leaving your FTP credentials on the application is the way someone can steal/remove everything. I'd suggest using PHP code instead.

PHP/Server-Client communication also works.

This is why I recommend it only for private use right now. ?
