Why do we require a .com or .net domain?

Because if you can't afford a TLD you shouldn't be running a forum. I'll support some members who don't have a TLD but not all.

What if the TLD is .pw, .se, .is, etc. and not a .com or .net?

Since he said if you cannot afford a domain I'm going to guess he means just free domains such as .tk

My response is the same as 'Network'.

I have a .pw domain.

Kogan - April 10, 2015, 12:10 pm

I will support all non-free TLDs (nothing like .tk though) - so that includes .pw, .is, .se etc..

EDIT:

Updated thread with information. Thanks all! ?

Do you have a solution to the error people get sometimes when they attempt to upload a theme?

It says something similar to "There is an error in the theme."

I am having a problem with JQuery (or so I believe..) I have done a lot of surfing and google camping to believe it is caused by that.

So my problem is that when users click the "rate" button to add reputation, the reputation dialog does not pop up.

This happens with the current theme I am using (for 1.8) but any theme before 1.8 that I use, they work like a charm. (But are incompatible and I don't like them)

Support is provided via skype only, please add me on skype.

Thanks all!
