Thread: Forgot the name of an anime..

Hi,

I had my anime list in a txt until I discovered hummingbird today, however I managed to lose a few anime names of the txt.

It was psychological anime about a boy that wants a normal student life and transfers to a school with just 4 (or 5) girls and one teacher. The girls don't see the point of life anymore and one of the girls keeps trying to kill the boy in the beginning of the anime.

That's all I remember.

Hopefully someone knows which anime this is.

Exactly what I was thinking.

I just finished watching the new episode of the sequel today. (y)

Is this anime good??

I saw the first couple of episodes while it was airing & then dropped it cause I thought it was pretty stupid.

I saw a recent movie & another sequel come out.

I'll watch it if this is good.

It's... entertaining.

As you said, the first couple of episodes were pretty stupid. It gets interesting during the last arc. The last arc was really fascinating, at least for me. Besides that, it was just okay.

Nah that was literally all CG and fanservice, would not recommend that unless you are into that stuff.

Grisaia no Kajitsu, is based upon a visual novel that topped the charts. You have to play the game first to understand the whole theme. Still a very good series, watch it either way

Thanks, this was the one. ?

Need to finish it and watch the sequel.

The series was crap compared to the VN, what they did with Yumiko's and to some extent Sachi's routes was just horrible, I mean, why on earth would they remove the best bit of the VN?

Spoiler (Click to View)

You don't just remove Yuuji stopping a plane with a frozen turkey...

I loved Grisaia no Kajitsu. It's definitely one of my favorites. I'll check out the VN sense you guys are saying that it's really good.

I absolutely loved Grisaia no Kajitsu. It had hella cliffhangers though, so I think I'm gonna wait for the sequel to finish airing before I watch it :3
