

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Maybe a thread for what works...and what doesn't..?

wasp714 - April 21, 2015, 1:59 pm

Hi Guys

I've bought a few programs and tools from members of HF , and read through countless pages of vouch's only to find the product doesn't perform as well as expected or not at all?

I thought hell it would be a dam sight easier to go to a thread and look up a none performer or maybe a good product but appalling support?

I'm going to give the product owner til the end of this week to sort my issue...after then I will name and shame them or the support they don't offer!
pls feel free to post you're experiences here too!

Sakura-chan - April 21, 2015, 2:08 pm

This is why I don't buy things off HF. It's usualy (and not always) just people asking for vouches from people who never bought the product.

wasp714 - April 21, 2015, 2:26 pm

Yeah...I'm fairly new to the scene...that being said..I'm finding that most so called "hacking" is more a case of chance, the hope a client doesn't have up to date and latest virus security, and or totally stupid people at the other end? Don't get me wrong, there are some gr8 "hackers" out there...but a very slim chance of actually chatting with them? I've bought products where the support has said "make sure virus security is switched off" or "it's not compatible" ! It has to be compatible or I may as well use teamviewer and ask the client to accept my connection? I buy tools a programs to allow me to do it unknown?