Raz3r - April 22, 2015, 12:39 pm

Raz3r's Web-forensics help desk.

I've finally opened up a HelpDesk, I can assist in the following areas.Doxing
Detracing
Anything regarding web-forensics

Note

I will not help obtain CC/bank information.

Stealing. - April 22, 2015, 12:41 pm

I don't have any questions but just going to wish you luck on your HelpDesk. Hope it'll be active, it's always nice to see people help.

Optimized - April 22, 2015, 12:42 pm

Don't get upset if this doesn't take off. It might but I just feel... it's not something many people need a lot of help in. You know, all the guides tutorials etc. out there already.

It depends.

If they're closed and no part of HF, then yes.

If they scammed you, I'll try it free.

If not, it's around $15

Databases.

Or, if they're over 18 ISP dox them.

You can link a SSN to a CC fast. But since we're not allowed to talk about this, I'll leave it at that.

How would you go about parsing a database, only using XAMPP, and command prompt or terminal?
With the purpose being on shortening the databases by a drastic amount of space, in order to expect faster results.

parse it, this can be done in many programming languages but its easier in python imo.it will organize it into sections such as name:email:hash:etc

Say that you stumble upon this scenario down below:

You have just gone through doxing someone and for one pf many times you see a faked name on all social media accounts, no sign of family, and no sign of relatives. Viewing any cached pages is useless, and there is no username alias. After various fiddling around the profiles you still find nothing, you are about to give up since the name is fake, and the geo-location that is presumed appears fake also. However, you find his supposed car which is 100% confirmed, and a license plate number screenshot of the car is clear, assuming that the plate is from the US, how would you go about finding? Also, NexusLexus is not a valid choice option.

Search through DB's for car info, then reverse image search the pic.

Until he leaks it, you'll have to SE him.
Call him on the phone and pretend to be hosting a servay.
Ask basic questions then at the end, ask for his address to mail the prize to.

Most people have a "business" email that they use for most everything, be probably linked that somewhere.

Need help, or are you confused on a tactic: A website like Webpages but for different countries like Brazil, China, etc...

What tactic are you confused on: Finding the address of someone in another country.

Have you done research: Yes, I have tried so many websites and have spent all day trying to find one.

Some countries just don't have a public phone boom, which makes it extremely hard finding an address for a target that lives in such a country. For example Australia. The best way to do this is google the parents, you could find for example a LinkedIn.

A. I want information on ways to discover leaked databases

B. I have looked on google to no avail im unsure if direct answers are against forum rules, but just a nudge in the right direction should be enough

Try finding dumps on other boards. Private ones are sold.

Crawl other forums that specialize in this.

Some people sell private DB's that only 2-3 people have.

Try to get as many stresser and VPN Db's as you can, most people get a booter and VPN.

I have a username, but I've tried everything. I do have contact with this person so SEing is an option. But other than that, what can I do to start the dox with just this username

Raz3r - May 23, 2015, 2:49 pm

If nothing comes up with the username, SE the person into giving a phone or email.
If you got an email, DBs are the best place to check.

Sorry to steal the thread but:

- 1) Search the username on Skype and other instant messaging programs, likely that they have one.
 - 1.1) If the skype is live:username then it is always username@.....
So it could be username@gmail.com, username@hotmail.com as their email etc.
- 2) Search the username on Google with special search parameters.
- 3) Ask if he has any other accounts.

If you've got your full name/other info displayed on the Google Search Engine. According to the recent American/EU law, you can request Google Webmaster Google Tools to actually deindex anything related to your specific name. Obviously they will ask for proof of identity, but it should be easy.

You can also change information on cached indexed pages, wich are out of date, and then remove them them here;

<https://support.google.com/webmasters/answer/1663691?hl=en>

If it was my decision, I would just route the data elsewhere. So let's say you've got your email on a forum post, but you can't get it removed, you can push back the page and have your "false" info come up first. It's basically dilution & data rerouting.

I'll be on a mobile from now on, that means I can't answer most questions.

Regards.

Regards. Not true, you can only get information if the site is EU related or if you are EU related. 28 countries.

The info you request to be removed, will only be removed on the EU google, not any U.S. google.

Doesn't really benefit American Citizens at all anymore. It has changed.

Precisely this. If for example, your information was posted on a U.S site and you were an EU citizen, you could get it removed. However, U.S and U.S citizenship requires an alternative method.

Several years ago when I was a retarded kid I posted something on Yahoo Answers. It connects an old alias to an email, as well as some sensitive information that I'd rather not someone find out about. I've tried seeing if Yahoo would remove the post, but they wouldn't. Any ideas on how I could get it removed?
